BALTIMORE RAVENS 2009 REVIEW / 2010 INFO

2009 SEASON OVERVIEW

In 2009, the Ravens produced their 6th playoff team of the decade (2000-09), 3rd best (tied with Pittsburgh) in the AFC behind Indianapolis (9) and New England (7). Baltimore opened the '09 campaign with 3 straight victories and won 3 of the last 4 entering the playoffs. The Ravens then upended the Patriots (33-14) in the Wild Card round, becoming the 1st road team to win a playoff game at New England since 1978. Baltimore then fell at Indianapolis in the Divisional game (20-3). Highlights during the regular season included a sweep of the AFC West, including a road victory at division winner San Diego (31-26) and a 30-7 thumping of Denver, a 20-17 OT triumph over the Steelers and back-to-back maulings over the Lions (48-3) and Bears (31-7). Heartbreaks included a 27-21 loss at New England when WR Mark Clayton dropped a 1st-down pass at the Patriots' 6 with less than a minute to play, a 33-31 defeat at Minnesota when K Steve Hauschka missed a 44-yard FG at game's end, the 17-15 loss to the Colts when QB Joe Flacco was intercepted at Indy's 13 with 2:49 left in the game, and the 23-20 defeat at Pittsburgh that included 2 TDs called back by penalties and a TD pass dropped in the end zone. ... John Harbaugh and Flacco, who set the NFL record for most wins ever (13, including playoffs) by a rookie head coach starting a rookie QB in 2008, now have the league mark for earning the playoffs in their 1st 2 seasons by such a pair.

2009 OFFENSE

• The Ravens produced the top 3 offensive games in team history: 548 yards vs. Detroit, 501 vs. Kansas City and 479 vs. Cleveland on 9/27. Baltimore also tied the franchise record for points in a season (391) and set a new record for total TDs (47).

• For the 1st time in team history, Baltimore had a 3,000-yard passer (Joe Flacco - 3,613), a 1,000-yard rusher (Ray Rice - 1,339) and a 1,000-yard receiver (Derrick Mason - 1,028) in the same season.

• Here are other team records set by the offense: Flacco's 88.9 QB rating and completion percentage (63.1), and Rice's rushing yards per attempt (5.3). Three marks fell just short (2nd) of team records: Rice's total yards from scrimmage (2,041), Flacco's completions (315) and his yards per attempt (7.24).

• Baltimore finished 13th in total offense (351.2 ypg) and 5th in NFL rushing yards (2,200 for 137.5 ypg).

• Most impressive individuals included Rice, who finished 6th in the NFL in rushing and 1st among RBs in catches (78) and receiving yards (702); Mason caught 73 passes and 7 TDs.

2009 DEFENSE

• The Ravens' defense finished 3rd in the NFL in total yards (300.5) and 3rd in points allowed (16.3). It was the 7th consecutive season Baltimore's defense finished in the NFL's top 6.

• The Ravens finished 2nd in the NFL for fewest TDs allowed, including 4 games when the defense allowed no TDs, and 2 more when it gave up just 1.

• The defense was 1st in rushing yards per attempt (3.4) and 8th (tied) in passing yards per game (207.3). Baltimore also held opposing QBs to a passer rating of 71.9 (6th in NFL). The red-zone "D" (41.9 %) was 4th best in the NFL.

2009 SPECIAL TEAMS

• The Ravens were 1st in the NFL in kickoff return average (26.2), despite using 3 different returners: CB Chris Carr (24.2) started the season and was replaced by CB Lardarius Webb (26.2), who was placed on IR, and then RB Jalen Parmele (31.4) stepped in.

• Importantly, special teams provided the Ravens' offense with the NFL's 5th-best average starting field position (31.8).

• Steve Hauschka was the team's placekicker for the season's 1st 9 games and then was waived. K Billy Cundiff, who converted 12 of 17 FGs for the Ravens, finished the campaign.

WIZARDRY OF OZ

DT Haloti Ngata became the Ravens' 9th 1st-round draft choice in the team's 14-year history to earn Pro Bowl honors. Since taking likely Hall of Famers LT Jonathan Ogden (retired after '07 season) and LB Ray Lewis with the 1st 2 picks in team history in 1996, GM Ozzie Newsome and staff continually enjoy tremendous success at the top of the draft. In 2008, Oz drafted QB Joe Flacco in the 1st round and RB Ray Rice in the 2nd round. This past season, playing every offensive snap, 1st-round choice Michael Oher was a standout starter at right tackle and also played well in the 5 games he started at LT.

2010 OPPONENTS

In 2010, the Ravens will play the AFC East and the NFC South. Baltimore will also face Denver and Houston, both teams that finished 2nd in their respective divisions in 2009.

Other key players who finished on IR were: Pro Bowl special teams ace Brendon Ayanbadejo (thigh), who earned an AFC Defensive Player of the Week award in Week 3, S Haruki Nakamura (ankle), another of Baltimore's top special teams performers, and a pair of promising DTs in Brandon McKinney (back) and Lamar Divens (hip). Taking over a team that produced a 5-11 mark in 2007, John Harbaugh guided the '08 Ravens to an 11-5 record and an appearance in the AFC Championship game where they lost a heart-stopping battle to the eventual Super Bowl Champion Steelers. En route to the conference title game, Harbaugh tied the NFL record (since 1978) for turnarounds for head coaches taking over a sub-.500 team, and he became just the 5th rookie head coach to win his first 2 playoff games. In 2009, "Harbs" became the 10th coach since 1990 to reach the playoffs in his 1st 2 seasons as a head coach (3-2 playoff record).

CAM'S O.C. SUCCESS

Cam Cameron, Baltimore's offensive coordinator, guided a Ravens' attack in 2009 that tied the franchise record for points (391 in 1996) and also set a record for most TDs scored (47, breaking the 1996 mark of 45).

In 2008, Cameron was hired by John Harbaugh after serving 1 season (2007) as Miami's head coach and 5 seasons before that guiding the Chargers' explosive attack. Cameron, who Harbaugh has known for 28 years, is acknowledged as one of the top developers of QBs in the NFL. Prior to his 1-year stint in Miami, 4 of Cameron's last 5 starting QBs earned Pro Bowl or collegiate All-American recognition: Philip Rivers and Drew Brees in San Diego, Antwaan Randle El, when Cameron was the Indiana head coach, and Gus Frerotte, when he tutored the QBs for the Redskins.

2009 Offensive Highlights/Ravens Records:

• In 2009, the Ravens tied the franchise record for points (391 in 1996) and also set a record for most TDs scored (47, breaking the 1996 mark of 45). Additionally, Baltimore registered a team-record 22 rushing TDs.

• The Ravens produced the top 3 offensive games in team history: 548 yards vs. Detroit, 501 vs. Kansas City and 479 vs. Cleveland.

• For the 1st time in frachise history, Baltimore had a 3,000-yard passer (Joe Flacco, 3,613), a 1,000-yard rusher (Ray Rice, 1,339) and 1,000-yard receiver (Derrick Mason, 1,028) in the same season.

• Here are other team records set by the offense in 2009: Flacco's 88.9 QB rating and completion percentage (63.1), and Rice's rushing yards per attempt (5.3). Three marks fell just short (2nd) of team records: Rice's total yards from scrimmage (2,041), Flacco's completions (315) and his yards per attempt (7.24).

• Under Cameron, Baltimore is 9-1 (5-1 in '09) when posting a 100/200 day – rushing for 100 yards and passing for 200 yards.

- Suggs has also recovered 11 fumbles during his career, 2nd most in Ravens history (Ray Lewis, 15).

DOMINANT FORCE

One of the NFL's most disruptive forces, DT Haloti Ngata was named to his 1st Pro Bowl as a starter in 2009. Though he missed Weeks 9 and 10 with an ankle injury -- snapping his streak of consecutive games played/started at 55 -- Ngata posted 41 tackles (23 solo), 1.5 sacks, 1 FF and 1 FR in 2009. A key cog in Baltimore's rush defense, from 12/17/06 to 10/4/09, he helped the Ravens produce a 39-game streak without allowing a 100-yard rusher.

Ngata Quick Hit:

- The Ravens have a history of strong run defense, but with Ngata's help the past 4 seasons, Baltimore's ground "D" has improved markedly from what it was before he entered the NFL.

Rushing "D" Quick Hits:

- Dating back to 2006, when Ngata entered the NFL, the Ravens have allowed a league-low 26 rushing TDs and the NFL's 2nd-fewest rushing 1st downs (268, with the Vikings at 255).

BACK IN ACTION

NT Kelly Gregg, a cornerstone of the Ravens' D-line and perhaps one of the NFL's most underrated players, returned to action in 2009 after missing all of 2008 recovering from microfracture knee surgery. The Ravens' No. 2 all-time leading tackler (680 stops), Gregg finished the 2007 campaign with a career-high 111 tackles. From 2003-2007, he totaled at least 100 tackles in 4 seasons, an achievement no other interior lineman was able to accomplish.

Since 2002, only 1 interior lineman has registered more tackles than Gregg's 661 (Ryan Pickett, 665). What makes this feat even more impressive is that Gregg missed the entire '08 campaign. Here is a look at the top NFL DT tacklers from 2002-2009:

MOST TACKLES BY INTERIOR LINEMEN (Since 2002)

Rk.	Player (Team)	Tackles

2.	Kelly Gregg (Bal.)	661
3.	Pat Williams (Min.)	596
4.	John Henderson (Jax.)	565
5.	Marcus Stroud (Buf.)	541

(Totals reflect each team's coaching film review.)
Missed the entire 2008 season.*

Gregg Quick Hits:

- Gregg has 680 career stops, standing behind only LB Ray Lewis (2,346) in Ravens history.
- Gregg is the only DT in Ravens history to record 100 tackles in a season, doing so 4 separate times ('03, '05, '06, '07). In fact, only 1 other Ravens D-lineman has ever had 100 stops in a year. That player is DE Michael McCrary, who had 102 in '98 and 103 in '00.
- Gregg racked up 64 tackles (4th most on the team) in 2009.

RB Ray Rice ran 83 yards for a touchdown on the 1st play from scrimmage, and the Ravens never looked back in the 33-14 Wild Card victory at New England. And that wasn't all that Baltimore did in the 1st quarter of its one-sided thumping of the Patriots. Three QB Tom Brady turnovers helped the Ravens push to a 24-0, 1st-period lead. Brady's 1st miscue came when OLB Terrell Suggs stripped the Pats' QB of the ball and recovered the fumble, which led to a FB Le'Ron McClain 1-yard TD. CB Chris Carr then intercepted Brady, setting up Rice's 2nd TD (1-yard rush). S Ed Reed intercepted another Brady pass that was followed by a 27-yard Billy Cundiff field goal. A misplayed punt in the 2nd quarter gave the Patriots the start of their lone 1st-half TD (Brady to WR Julian Edelman, 6 yards). Another Brady INT set up a 3rd-quarter Cundiff FG (23 yards). A 2nd Brady-to-Edelman TD (1 yard) made the score 27-14 after 3 quarters. RB Willis McGahee finished the scoring with a 3-yard TD in the final period. The Ravens rushed 52 times for 234 yards, including 159 (22 carries) by Rice. QB Joe Flacco threw just 10 passes, completing 4. Brady, who was sacked 3 times, was 23-of-42 for 154 yards with a lost fumble and 3 INTs. The Ravens' victory over New England was the Pats' 1st postseason loss at home since 1978, snaping a streak of 11 consecutive playoff wins at home.

Saturday, January 16, 2010 • 8:15 PM EST • Lucas Oil Stadium • Indianapolis

The Ravens' playoff run came to a halt at Lucas Oil Stadium in Indianapolis with a 20-3 defeat to the Colts. Baltimore turned the ball over 4 times, including 2 INTs by Joe Flacco and 2 costly fumbles. The game was tied at 3 until late in the 2nd quarter, but future Hall of Fame QB Peyton Manning drove the Colts and scored on a 10-yard TD pass to rookie WR Austin Collie just before the 2-minute warning. The Ravens went 3-and-out in the next series, which gave Manning enough time to maneuver 64 yards on 8 plays for another 7 points. That score came on a 2nd TD toss, this time to WR Reggie Wayne (3 yards) with 3 seconds remaining, giving the Colts a 17-3 halftime lead. After the Colts opened the game on an opening-drive FG by former Ravens K Matt Stover (44 yards), current Ravens K Billy Cundiff connected on his only FGA (25 yards) on Baltimore's 1st possession of the game, tying the contest at 3. Neither team could score on their next few drives, until the Manning-to-Collie TD near the end of the 2nd quarter. In the 2nd half, the Ravens were unable to move the ball well against a formidable Colts' defense. A 4th-quarter RB Ray Rice fumble and 2 Flacco INTs in Baltimore's final 2 possessions sealed the Ravens' fate. The Ravens' 5th-ranked rush defense held the Colts to 42 rushing yards in the loss. S Ed Reed recorded his 7th INT in 7 career postseason games when he picked off Manning in the 3rd quarter.

It was a battle of the NFL's top 2 defenses, and Baltimore fought through multiple injuries. S Daren Stone suffered a concussion on the opening kickoff, but returned in the 2nd half. CBs Frank Walker (dislocated shoulder) and Corey Ivy both left briefly before returning. However, RB Willis McGahee was carted off in the 4th quarter because of a helmet-to-helmet shot from S Ryan Clark. After not committing a TO in his 1st 2 playoff games, QB Joe Flacco threw 3 INTs and lost a fumble. Pittsburgh took a 13-0 lead on 2 Jeff Reed FGs and a 65-yard TD pass from QB Ben Roethlisberger to WR Santonio Holmes. S Jim Leonhard returned a punt 45 yards to the Steelers' 17, which – along with a pass interference call in the end zone – set up McGahee's 3-yard TD run in the 2nd quarter. After another Reed FG, McGahee pulled the Ravens within 2 (16-14 in the 4th quarter) with his 2nd TD. A botched punt from Pittsburgh's P Mitch Berger gave Baltimore the ball at midfield, and another end zone pass interference call led to McGahee's 1-yard TD run. On their ensuing series, the Ravens drove for a go-ahead score, but S Troy Polamalu jumped in front of WR Derrick Mason with 4:24 left and raced 40 yards to paydirt with Flacco's 2nd INT. His last INT – on an attempt over the middle to RB Ray Rice – sealed the outcome with 1:11 remaining.

Two fierce defenses were featured in this hard-fought battle. It wasn't until K Matt Stover's 43-yard FG with :53 left that the outcome was decided. To get there, QB Joe Flacco, who became the NFL's 1st rookie QB to win 2 playoff games, led a 9-play, 51-yard drive to set up the clinching kick. On their 1st drive, Titans Pro Bowl RB Chris Johnson took a short pass from Kerry Collins in the left flat for a 28-yard gain. Johnson then scored on an 8-yard TD run. On the ensuing series, Flacco hit WR Derrick Mason for a 48-yard TD bomb. Just before the 1st half ended, Tennessee marched to the Ravens' 22-yard line, but RB LenDale White was stripped by LB Jarret Johnson, and the Ravens recovered. The Titans tried a 51-yard FG on 4th down instead of punting in the 3rd, and K Rob Bironas pushed it WL. In the 4th, Stover hit a 21-yard FG to make it 10-7. Later, Titans TE Alge Crumpler fumbled on the Ravens' 6-yard line. Tennessee tied the game again after stopping the Ravens and then scored on Bironas' 27-yard FG. The Ravens made the most of their last possession. Flacco completed a 23-yard pass to TE Todd Heap on a critical 3rd-and-2. RB Willis McGahee then made an 11-yard run, and Flacco found WR Mark Clayton for 8 yards to pull within Stover's range. With less than 1:00 remaining, Collins completed 1 pass, but his last 3 attempts fell to the turf.

The Ravens forced 5 turnovers from the Dolphins, who had tied an NFL record with only 13 giveaways in 2008. S Ed Reed snared 2 INTs from QB Chad Pennington, who only threw 7 INTs in the regular season. Reed took his 1st 64 yards for a TD, the 12th score of his career. Both teams traded FGs before the INTs began accumulating. At 8:56 in the 2nd quarter, S Jim Leonhard returned the 1st theft of the day 20 yards to Miami's 45-yard line, but the Ravens punted after a 3-and-out. On the following series, Reed ran under a rainbow from Pennington and weaved 64 yards for the TD. Baltimore added another K Matt Stover FG (31 yards) before the 1st half ended. CB Fabian Washington posted the 3rd INT just after halftime, which resulted in another Ravens 3-and-out. But DT Marques Douglas stripped RB Patrick Cobbs to end the Dolphins' ensuing drive, and LB Terrell Suggs recovered on Miami's 19-yard line. Four plays later, FB Le'Ron McClain, scored from 8 yards out. Reed continued to terrorize Pennington, who drove to Baltimore's 15-yard line when Reed grabbed his 2nd INT at the 8-yard line in the 3rd. The Dolphins closed the margin with a 5-play drive culminating in a TD pass to RB Ronnie Brown, but it wasn't enough to overcome the deficit. The Ravens' offense put the margin out of reach when a 71-yard drive ended with a 5-yard scoring run from QB Joe Flacco.

Despite holding the high-powered Colts' passing attack to only 161 yards, intercepting Peyton Manning twice, and keeping the AFC's top-ranked offense out of the end zone, the Ravens were kicked out of the race to Super Bowl XLI, 15-6. K Adam Vinatieri booted 5 FGs, while Baltimore could only muster 2 in the difficult loss. Steve McNair finished 18-of-29 (173 yards) with a 62.1 completion percentage, the highest in team single-game postseason history. Even though McNair out-dueled Manning, who went 15-of-30 for 170 yards (39.6 rating), the Ravens couldn't bounce back from McNair's 2 INTs. Coming off a 40-yard FG from K Matt Stover that opened the 2nd period, S Ed Reed got his hands on a Manning pass less than a minute later. Down 6-3, McNair drove to the Colts' 4, but was picked off in the end zone. The Baltimore defense came up big, as usual. Each time Manning would march into Ravens territory, the unit clamped down, forcing 5 FGs. The Ravens pressured Manning all game but only managed 1 sack. On another day, this defensive effort might have been enough to defeat the Colts, but this January evening proved to be a different story for the Ravens.

The AFC North Division champion Baltimore Ravens, the youngest team in the 2003 playoffs, lost a hard-fought 20-17 decision to Tennessee in the Wild Card matchup. The game was decided on K Gary Anderson's 46-yard FG with 29 seconds left in the game. The kick came only minutes after the Ravens rallied to tie the contest, thanks to a 9-play, 71-yard journey that ended with a 35-yard TD pass from QB Anthony Wright to TE Todd Heap. On the Titans' ensuing possession, CB Chris McAlister picked off Titans QB Steve McNair, and the Ravens were poised to forge ahead. However, Tennessee held Baltimore's offense to a 3-and-out, and McNair moved the Titans into FG range. Anderson, who also kicked a 45-yarder earlier in the 4th quarter, did the rest. The Ravens intercepted McNair 3 times, including a S Will Demps pick which he returned a postseason franchise-record 56 yards for a TD. K Matt Stover's 43-yard FG in the 2nd quarter put Baltimore ahead 10-7 at halftime, but the Ravens came up just short.

The Ravens' string of consecutive playoff wins was stopped at 5, as the top-seeded Pittsburgh Steelers defeated the defending Super Bowl champs, 27-10. Baltimore's lone TD came in the 3rd quarter when WR/RS Jermaine Lewis raced for an NFL postseason-record 88-yard punt return for a TD to make the score 20-10. But, the Steelers iced the game by driving 83 yards on 12 plays that took almost 6 minutes off the clock, scoring the game's final TD on a Kordell Stewart-to-Plaxico Burress 32-yard pass. The Steelers' defense limited the Ravens to just 7 1st downs, 150 total net yards (including only 22 rushing yards) and forced 4 turnovers (including 3 INTs of QB Elvis Grbac). LB Chad Scott picked off Grbac on his 1st pass attempt and returned the ball 19 yards to the Ravens' 43. Early on, the Steelers managed only a FG by K Kris Brown for a quick 3-0 lead. After forcing a Ravens' punt that gave Pittsburgh possession at the 49-yard line, Stewart led his troops on a 7-play, 51-yard drive that was capped by a 1-yard run from RB Amos Zereoue for a 10-0 Steelers lead. The Steelers scored 10 points in the 2nd quarter on another Zereoue 1-yard run and a 46-yard boot by Brown to extend their lead to 20-0.

The Ravens dominated the Miami Dolphins, 20-3, and became the only team in NFL history to win their 1st 5 postseason games. Miami's only points came on an Olindo Mare 33-yard FG after the Ravens' WR/RS Jermaine Lewis fumbled the opening kickoff. After Miami jumped to the quick 3-0 lead, the Ravens started a 90-yard drive with 4 passes in 5 plays, and then 11 runs on the next 12 plays, ending with a Terry Allen 4-yard TD burst. Neither team scored again in the 1st half. Miami P Matt Turk placed a punt at the Ravens' 1-yard line midway through the 3rd quarter, but QB Elvis Grbac hit WR Travis Taylor on a 4-yard TD to cap a 99-yard drive. Taylor helped set up his own TD with a 45-yard grab from Grbac on 3rd-and-1, and a 15-yard reverse on a 2nd-and-6. LB Peter Boulware forced a Jay Fiedler fumble that was recovered by DT Sam Adams early in the 4th quarter, which led to a Matt Stover 35-yard FG for a 17-3 lead. On Miami's next possession, CB Duane Starks intercepted Fiedler's pass that bounced off the shoulder of WR James McKnight to thwart a Dolphins' scoring threat and set up Stover's 2nd FG.

The Ravens won Super Bowl XXXV with a 34-7 victory over the New York Giants. The Ravens allowed the Giants just 152 total net yards (3rd-fewest in Super Bowl history), and NY crossed midfield just twice. Baltimore's "D" tied a Super Bowl record with 4 INTs. The Ravens also became just the 3rd Super Bowl team in NFL history to not commit a turnover. Baltimore opened the scoring with a Trent Dilfer-to-Brandon Stokley 38-yard TD. Ravens K Matt Stover kicked a 47-yard FG with 1:48 left in the 2nd quarter. CB Duane Starks put Baltimore ahead 17-0 in the 3rd quarter when he raced 49 yards after an INT. On the kickoff, Giants RS Ronnie Dixon raced 97 yards to put the Giants on the board, 17-7. Not to be outdone, Baltimore's WR/RS Jermaine Lewis took the Giants' ensuing kickoff and tightroped down the Ravens' sideline for an 84-yard TD. The 3 scores in 3 consecutive plays set a Super Bowl record, and the back-to-back KOR-TDs were also a record. RB Jamal Lewis (27 carries for 102 yards) scored from 3 yards out on a play that was reviewed and upheld by instant replay to give the Ravens a 31-7 lead. Stover kicked his 2nd FG to complete the scoring with 5:27 on the clock.

On Oakland's next play from scrimmage, DT Tony Siragusa knocked QB Rich Gannon out of the game with a shoulder injury. CB Duane Starks intercepted QB Bobby Hoying's 1st pass to set up a K Matt Stover FG and a 10-0 Baltimore lead. In the 3rd quarter, a QB Trent Dilfer INT led to a K Sebastian Janikowski 24-yard FG to cut the Ravens' lead to 10-3. A Stover 28-yard boot gave the Ravens a 13-3 lead. A fumble by RB Jamal Lewis gave Oakland the ball at the Ravens' 43 near the end of the 3rd quarter, but Starks intercepted Gannon, who had returned to action in the 2nd half. Stover kicked a 21-yarder in the 4th quarter to give the Ravens a 16-3 lead. The Ravens' aggressive defense forced 5 turnovers, limited the Raiders to 191 yards, including 24 rushing yards, and sacked the Raiders' QBs 4 times. The Ravens advanced to the AFC Championship game with a gutsy 24-10 win at Tennessee. The Titans lost only 2 games in 2 years on their home turf – both to the Ravens in 2000. The opportunistic Ravens scored 2 4th-quarter TDs on returns to break a 10-10 tie. S Anthony Mitchell raced 90 yards for a score after DT Keith Washington blocked a 37-yard FG attempt by K Al Del Greco, his 2nd blocked FG of the game. LB Ray Lewis then intercepted a pass by QB Steve McNair and raced 50 yards for a TD to seal the 24-10 win. The Titans opened the game with an 11-play, 68-yard drive that ended with a 2-yard Eddie George rushing TD. The Ravens tied the game, 7-7, when RB Jamal Lewis scored on a 1-yard TD that was set up by TE Shannon Sharpe's 56-yard reception from QB Trent Dilfer. Titans WR Chris Coleman blocked a Kyle Richardson punt, giving Tennessee the ball on the Ravens' 25 with 1:44 left in the half, but Del Greco's 31-yard FGA hit the left upright.

Ravens RB Jamal Lewis scored 2 TDs. Lewis' 1st TD came on a 1-yard dive to complete a 10-play, 75-yard drive. His 2nd score came in the 3rd quarter on a 27-yard burst where he broke 3 tackles. QB Trent Dilfer completed 9 of 14 passes for 130 yards, with 1 TD and no INTs. TEAM QUOTES

"I think it's unspoken that the ultimate goal is to win a championship. There are a lot of championships – there's a division championship, there's a conference championship, and there's a world championship. But, I think what we want to do, and we talk to our guys all the time, is we want to become champions and all the things that entails. We want to become something. We're not trying to get somewhere. We want to be something, and that's a process that goes on no matter if we win a bunch of championships. We're going to try to become something even better. I think if our guys focus on that every single day, we'll have a chance to win a championship or two."

Vikings head coach Brad Childress on what he saw in John Harbaugh that indicated he'd be a good NFL head coach:

"As a special teams coordinator, I think the thing that's unique about that guy is, aside from the head coach, he really speaks to the whole team. So you're not just talking to an offensive segment or a defensive segment, you're talking about offensive and defensive guys playing together. I thought he did a great job at teaching and motivating [in Philadelphia], and sometimes that can be hard crossing over there. It didn't make a difference whether you were a wide receiver or a defensive back, a defensive lineman or a linebacker, he had a great way about him, a great command and presence in the room, a great way of communicating."

Head coach John Harbaugh on his relationship with Ravens owner Steve Bisciotti:

"There's sort of a big brother relationship going on there. He's really challenging in all kinds of good ways. We're both trying to build something special. We're both not afraid to say we're trying to build a dynasty here. We're trying to create something that the NFL's never seen before, where people are going to look back and say, 'That's the standard. We want to be what the Ravens were for that period of time.'"

DEFENSE QUOTES

Patriots QB Tom Brady on the Ravens' defense:

"They've got instinctive players at every position. They can really disrupt offenses because each of their guys adds his own unique quality to the defense. A guy like Ed Reed, for example, who just covers up so much in the passing game, and Ray Lewis, who is so instinctive, you always have to be aware, because it could be any guy at any time.''

Ravens NT Kelly Gregg on DT Haloti Ngata:

"Haloti is a beast. He's got size, and he's an athlete. Each year, he's made jumps. He's active for a big guy. He's not just a plugger. He's got all the tools you want. If you're looking to make a defensive lineman, you're looking for a guy like Haloti. He's a good kid who's been through a lot in his life, and his mentality is that nothing's going to stop him."

QB Joe Flacco on the image of the Ravens' defense:

"I love the image of our defense. They play hard. They're physical. That's what football is. I hope that's the image of our whole team. You want to be tough guys that teams respect. I love the fact that we, as Baltimore Ravens, play like that."

Bengals head coach Marvin Lewis on the ability of Ravens' OLB Jarret Johnson:

"I think he's been a great football player ever since they've gotten him. His ability to my eye, what I've seen Jarret do, is be able to play in the passing game and on his feet. He's done an excellent job of that. He's been a great pass rusher, and he plays so doggone hard. I think he's just been an excellent football player and a guy that maybe not a lot of people know about, unless you play in this division. And when you play in this division and watch him week in and week out, you know what kind of football player he is."

QB Carson Palmer on what it is about the Ravens' defense that sets it apart from others:

"It's a number of things. You've got Ray Lewis, who is a Hall of Famer. Ed Reed is probably going to be a Hall of Famer. Terrell Suggs is destined to be a Hall of Famer. And those three guys are probably three of the best guys at their position in the NFL. They're all on the same team now, so that's a huge part of it. Then you add in [Haloti] Ngata, you add in Jarret Johnson. There are just so many good football players. They do such a good job drafting, and they do such a good job developing their young players that there is not a weakness. There is not a weak link. There are not a couple of guys you can attack. There is nobody that you look at on film and say, 'OK, we need to go at this guy,' because everybody can play. And then you have Ray leading them, who you know he's going to make sure that everybody gives it their all every day in practice and of course on game day. So, it's a very good combination of athletes, of big, strong, physical guys and guys that work extremely hard."

S Ed Reed on the accountability among the defense's players:

"This is one of the rare places, I haven't been anywhere else, but this place here is almost like a college feel. We talk about tradition. We talk about our defense as a tradition of upholding certain standards. Look, when you come up into this defense, there's a certain way you practice, there's a certain way you play. That's how we're built. I think, upstairs, Ozzie Newsome and that staff, they do a great job of seeking those guys out and putting those guys around us, and those guys are just blending in like this is not just football and a job, it's fun also. That's what keeps us going. That's what keeps you going at the end of the day, even as a little kid. When you were a kid, and kids today, they enjoyed this. That's the pure times of their life, to enjoy football, and a lot of us still have that little kid inside."

DE Trevor Pryce on D-line coach Clarence Brooks:

"I would have retired [following the '06 season] if it wasn't for having a coach like 'C.B.' That's the best thing I could say about him. He's a great coach. There are a lot of great coaches, but he's a better person. We love him to death. I mean honestly, we love him to death. We've always had this thing where the guys are messing around, players messing with the coaches, and we can go grab the quarterbacks coach, but nobody comes to his rescue. If you grab our coach, [Justin] Bannan and them boys sweep down on you like the wrath of God. I'm telling you, don't mess with C.B. He takes care of us, and we take care of him."

"I don't believe there is a weak link in our defense when they're all playing. What you find out in our meetings is that what makes the Ravens' defense so special is they have to be accountable to each other. As you're watching the tape, when a player does something good or something bad, you're going to hear echoes throughout that room of 'Great job' or 'Hey, that's not how we do it.' It's other people always talking in there, not just the coach. That's the thing we keep talking about, about the Ravens and their attitude."

ILB Ray Lewis on his love for the game of football and making an impression on other players in the league:

"I'll tell you this: From Day One – from college to this day – I've been chasing something. And not in a disrespectful way. I've never slowed down anyone else's path. I try to help guys like [the 49ers'] Patrick Willis, [the Seahawks'] Lofa Tatupu, [the Browns'] D'Qwell Jackson. I mentor them. And I don't like to judge myself against anybody. But, at the end of the day, I want to be the greatest player ever to strap it on. Not just because I was able to make plays, but to do that and to influence men, the souls of men, the spirits of men, the willingness of men."

"He's passionate. He has an incredible work ethic. He has great instincts that he combines with the fact that he studies so hard. He plays faster, and he always has, than he is. Not that he's slow by any stretch, but he knows where things are going. He sees it and anticipates it and then is able to go over and execute it. The way that he's able to rally guys around him, it's unique. You always talk about leadership – learned or born with it. I saw it [as a scout with the Ravens in 1996] from Day One from a very unique perspective from a rookie linebacker, and it looks like he hasn't stopped since."

Colts head coach Jim Caldwell on S Ed Reed:

"He may be one of the most instinctive players I've ever seen on a football field. He can cover an incredible amount of ground in a short period of time. Not only does he run fast and is a big hitter, but his instincts are just unbelievable. I think often players get a sense that they can see the entire field in a chunk and know what's coming and know what to anticipate. He is one of those guys. He reacts like you can't believe. He'll amaze you at least two or three times when you watch him on film. He just makes incredible plays."

OFFENSE QUOTES

"Flacco and Rice have emerged as one of the best young QB-RB duos in the league, and they've revitalized a Ravens' offense that historically had languished in the bottom third in the NFL statistically. Flacco is clearly the franchise quarterback the Ravens have been searching for, and Rice has made his mark as one of the more dynamic playmakers around. GM Ozzie Newsome and current director of player personnel (then director of college scouting) Eric DeCosta couldn't have fared much better with those two picks."

Ozzie Newsome on the athleticism of the offensive line:

"I like our athleticism, and another thing I like is our toughness and how physical they have become. They take pride in dominating an opponent. I don't know what their limit is with the offense, but they can become really good. We're just scratching the surface, and having [center Matt] Birk in the middle has made them even better."

NFL.com*'s Michael Lombardi on the Baltimore Ravens:

"When you first think of the Ravens, you think defense, right? Well, that is changing as the 2009 Ravens are an explosive offense built with power and toughness to play in the AFC North. When I worked for coach Bill Walsh with the 49ers, he was always excited to see the jump a player made from Year 1 to Year 2. He would always say, 'We will teach the system in Year 1 and develop the skills in Year 2.' Walsh would be very proud of the work the Ravens' coaching staff has done with second-year quarterback Joe Flacco. He is in command of the offense, as he uses that big arm to make all the throws. He might throw the best seven cut (corner route) in the NFL. Now with Ray Rice as the new runner to go along with Willis McGahee and Le'Ron McClain, the Ravens have a complete offense that can score points. Baltimore can play power football, which is essential for the AFC North, but they also can throw the ball effectively in large part due to the development of Flacco."

SI.com's* Don Banks on the Ravens' offense:

"The rest of the league's nightmare scenario for about 10 years now has been the thought of the Ravens with a big-time offense, and it's a fear that has finally come true in the Joe Flacco/Cam Cameron era."

RBs coach Wilbert Montgomery on the Ravens' three-pronged running attack:

"They all have their own running style, and that's a good thing. Willis [McGahee] will break more tackles. He is a strong runner. Ray [Rice] is a guy that can shake you and make you miss. And then Le'Ron [McClain] is a guy that can drop his shoulders and run over you. You're looking for help when you tackle him, and you're not in a hurry to get there."

Rookie T Michael Oher on draft day after being selected by the Ravens:

"It's been a long journey. Baltimore just got a great player. I'm not going to let them down. I'm going to give them everything I got. I felt like I was the best tackle in the draft."

FoxSports.com* and Sirius Radio's Adam Schein on the Ravens' offense and Cam Cameron:

"There is a wonderful feeling of confidence because of the way Cam Cameron puts his players in position to succeed. Watching him work during practice is quite impressive. Cameron and Hue Jackson are a great combination as offensive coordinator and quarterbacks coach. Cameron did an excellent job keeping defenses off balance last year. It's why Joe Flacco is in prime position to take a major step forward after a great rookie season."

Head coach John Harbaugh on WR Derrick Mason's pride and leadership for the team:

"There are different types of pride. I think the pride that Derrick displays, and we're talking about, is pride in one another – basically a servant-type pride mentality where you put the team before yourself, your teammate before yourself. You do everything you can to make the people around you as successful as they can be. That's something that you can really take pride in. I think that's the spirit that runs through our team."

ILB Ray Lewis on RB Ray Rice and the comparisons he draws to former NFL great Barry Sanders:

"He reminds me of a lot of guys, but the way he spins out of tackles, the one guy we saw come through here years ago was Barry Sanders. He had that type of ability. Those guys are built to where all their power is in their legs. … He's so low to the ground, he really reminds you of Barry Sanders. With his quickness, he reminds you of Eric Metcalf. He springs like a cat, and he has a heart like a lion."

Vikings head coach Brad Childress on QB Joe Flacco:

"Unflappable. I always talk about wanting flat-line quarterbacks, not riding the roller coaster, never too high, never too low, never letting them see you sweat. He exudes all of those. He has all the physical skills – he can see, he has stature, he can throw the outs, he can throw the long ball. I think what he did last year [as a rookie] is interesting. It takes quite a guy to do that, particularly in his first go-around. I see him picking up where he left off. Obviously, he knows where all the bones are buried now, going through the second time around."

SI.com*'s Ross Tucker on the emergence of QB Joe Flacco:

"I wasn't 100 percent sure about Flacco until I saw him in person on Sunday [10/4] against the Patriots. I am now completely on board. This guy is going to be a full-fledged star, even if stardom isn't a priority of his. Flacco is so unassuming and reticent about life as a starting quarterback, and a top 10 one at that, that he has the personality traits that should win over the blue collar faithful in Baltimore as much as his ability. I know the nickname 'Joe Cool' has already been bestowed on [Joe] Montana, but watching Flacco led to the same thoughts. His arm strength was a given ever since he did the spring workouts for scouts last year at Delaware. What the brightest football people couldn't know for sure was the poise he shows in the pocket, even when under duress."

The Sporting News'* Vinnie Iyer on the Ravens in 2009:

"Let's hope the critics of the Ravens' offense are finally silenced. They can run the ball. Joe Flacco has the arm to get the ball downfield. And oh yeah, with playmakers such as Ray Lewis and Ed Reed, they can still also score on defense."

ESPN MNF analyst Jon Gruden on rookie T Michael Oher:

"Ozzie Newsome knows All-Pro tackles. I think he saw a lot of Jonathan Ogden in Michael Oher when he was drafted. Newsome got it right again."

WR Derrick Mason on the toughness of QB Joe Flacco:

"You can't teach toughness. I don't care what you try to do. If a guy is not tough, he can't play in this league for a long time. Joe has that ability to stand in the pocket. He's done it game in and game out, to take a big hit and still get back up and go to the next play. And if he has to stand in the pocket again for the team, he does it. That's something you can't teach. It has to be in you, and fortunately for us, we have a quarterback who has a defensive mentality when it comes to standing in the pocket."

Ravens in Our Community 2009 Season Recap

Throughout the 2009 season, the Ravens' players, coaches, staff, mascot and cheerleaders served the Baltimore community and beyond through various events and programs.

Summer Days in Our Community

In June, Rice, QB Joe Flacco and youth at the Inaugural Ray Rice Day football camp in New Rochelle, NY.

During the offseason, the team's community involvement was in full swing in Baltimore and the players' hometown communities. Several players hosted football camps in their hometowns, including LB Ray Lewis, RB Ray Rice, S Ed Reed, WR Kelley Washington and S Tom Zbikowski. Additionally, the entire Ravens organization joined forces with volunteers from KaBOOM! and Good Samaritan Hospital (Baltimore, Md.) to construct a playground (right) for the children at the hospital's Child Development Center.

During Training Camp, more than 3,000 youth watched practice from the Community Corner set up for pre-scheduled youth groups and summer campers. Several players visited the youth after each practice.

To close out summer and kick off a season of community service, CB Chris Carr and T Joe Reitz joined Ravens staff and 8 members of the Lady Ravens Association to soil, level and sod 2 homes as volunteers for Sandtown Habitat for Humanity in late September.

The week of Thanksgiving included 7 events and 19 players donating food, funds and time to feed Baltimore-area families.

Nearly a dozen Ravens players hosted holiday parties or events to provide gifts for families and youth in need. Also, several players, including the entire defensive line, adopted families to spread holiday cheer.

RAVENS SEASON-ENDING PRESS CONFERENCE

OWNER STEVE BISCIOTTI, PRESIDENT DICK CASS, GENERAL MANAGER/EXECUTIVE VICE PRESIDENT OZZIE NEWSOME AND HEAD COACH JOHN HARBAUGH

Ravens head coach John Harbaugh's opening statement:
"Just want to welcome everybody here. I hope that our offensive and defensive meetings are as organized, Kevin [Byrne], as you just got everybody here right now. It was very impressive. But, normally you guys get a chance to talk football with coaches, and hopefully this will be a chance to expand on that and spend some time with Ozzie Newsome and Steve Bisciotti and Dick Cass. Fire away. Don't treat them any nicer than you treat me. But, we've got a good offseason start. We just got out of two days of really in-depth meetings with scouts and coaches and kind of organizing our plan for the next couple of months as we head into this offseason. It's been very productive, and it's been very honest, and guys have done a great job. So, with that, we'll turn it over.

[There are] two new coaches that we've had the privilege of inviting aboard, and they've decided to join us. Guys that we've known for various lengths of years [and] have tremendous respect for. To me, premier coaches in the National Football League to replace two coaches that did a great job for us as well, who are moving on to other things. Jim Zorn, our new quarterbacks coach, right here, if you could welcome Jim. And Dean Pees, our new linebackers coach."

With all the issues that surround the CBA and the uncapped year in 2010, how might that hamstring your efforts to get this team better as quickly as you can?
(BISCIOTTI) "We're having a meeting down in Ft. Lauderdale to get an update on the CBA on Saturday. As you know, we've agreed as a league to let [NFL Commissioner] Roger [Goodell] do the talking with the press. As far as us, personally, we kind of went into it assuming that we would probably go uncapped this year. We were in a situation that I think we probably have more restricted free agents than just about any team, right? We're close to 10 or something like that. So, even though we hit that final eight in this deal, it's not going to hamper us [that] much because we have 10 guys that we don't have to worry about like we would have. So, our roster is going to stay pretty much intact, and I don't really see it hampering us in our ability to do things. I'm pretty confident that we've got a budget that we're going to spend up to. We will spend as much as most of the teams, if not all of them. And, we've kind of got that budget already in place and already know most of the names where we're filling in."

Will it be tougher to improve at the wide receiver position with the new rules that are in place this year with free agents?
(NEWSOME) "No, not necessarily, because our past history [has shown that] we can acquire players. I think in that this is an uncapped year, there will be some real good players that are going to get cut. And we've had good success with Derrick Mason, Trevor Pryce, Samari Rolle – guys that got cut because of the salary cap situation that that particular team was in. So, I think that's going to increase our pool of players. I think in that the restricted pool is larger than normal, I think there's going to be some movement there also. And then, we've built this team through the draft, and that's another area. And then after the draft, then that allows for another group of players to get pushed out. So, when you look at all three of those phases, then there's an opportunity for us to improve our position in several different positions, as well as wide receiver."

In your opinion, what will it take for this team to become a Super Bowl team? Specifically, what areas do the Ravens need to upgrade and get better?
(BISCIOTTI) "I think a lot of it is focused on Joe [Flacco]. I don't think there's any doubt that he's the key to any kind of growth in the system. To some degree, he was maligned a little bit for not making a bigger step, but I think that what he did in his first year kind of set some unrealistic expectations. Roster stuff, that's really not my gig, but I do know that there's a lot of attention on Joe. And Joe just looks like the kind of guy that's ready to do what he has to do to get better. And, if we pushed him out of his box a little bit this year – and that might have been the perception – then maybe some shortcomings showed up that didn't show up in his first year, because we were not asking that much of him. So, this next year, it's time for him to do the things we know he's capable of doing."

(NEWSOME) "And to add to that, I think it begins with me. It begins with John. It begins with the other scouts. It begins with the coaches, and that will filter down to the players. Any time you enter a new season, you have to go in saying, 'We've got to get better.' Our 53-man roster has to be better, and players that are on that roster have got to be better players. The good part of that, we've got some young players, and those young players are ascending. And they should be better players. So, when you add that to what Steve talked about with Joe, and with us knowing that we are going to add pieces to the puzzle, then that should help us to [improve]. As I finished up the [personnel] meeting an hour ago with the staff, our goal is not to be having this press conference here today, but to be having it in Dallas next year. That's the ultimate goal."

Your position last year was that WR Demetrius Williams would be the guy to step up at receiver for the team. Why do you think Demetrius did not become the Ravens' go-to receiver this year as you had predicted?
(NEWSOME) "You have to look at it in the sense that what happened with Demetrius was Derrick [Mason], Mark [Clayton] and Kelley Washington. We created a competitive situation there, and John and Cam [Cameron] have the responsibility to put the best three receivers out on the field when we go to a three-wide receiver set, and the best two on the field when we're in a two-wide receiver set. I think the competition at that position lent itself to Demetrius being the No. 4 receiver."

(HARBAUGH) "So why is that? And Demetrius would say this, too. He is not able yet to do enough. You've got to be able to run the kind of routes, catch the ball in pressure situations, break the thing off at the right depth, make the right adjustments in pressure situations and do the kinds of things that are going to help us move the football and win games. And those other three guys did that better – offseason, training camp and throughout the year. We tried to put Demetrius in situations to be successful as much as we could, and we need more. And let me tell you, he wants to do more. And you need to be a better player to give us what we were looking for."

Do you see any situation where you might shift your philosophy from drafting the best available player to drafting a player that addresses a specific need this year?

(NEWSOME) "I think you could answer that question yourself. I know the majority of guys that are in this room, and young ladies, can answer that question for you. I'll never put this organization in a position where need becomes more apparent than the best player. It's not a philosophy that I've had from the very beginning. I think the success that we've had has been built on that. That's not going to change."

How concerned are you, with the uncertainty of the CBA's future, that it will impact the team's ability to reach your goal of eliminating the up-and-down nature of the team's results?
(BISCIOTTI) "I'm not worried at all. I don't see a correlation there, because I think we've got the best cap guys and the best guys to draft, the scouts and everything. So, I'm on an even playing field with the rest of my partners. I may not have as much experience as some of the other owners, but this guy I've got next to me here, and Eric [DeCosta] and all those guys have just put me in a position where we can still spend. So I'm still putting my team up against the other teams in the league. And I think we're as strong as anybody out there. So I don't think the problems with the CBA are going to impact me in any way, shape or form, more. If anything, I think it will be less because of the talent that we have in this building. I'm looking forward to the constraints, because if there are any constraints, then to me, it makes your decisions that much more important. And I'm going to rely on the guys that I have."

Do you think it was inexperience, injury, confidence or something else that led to QB Joe Flacco's up-and-down season?
(HARBAUGH) "All of those things probably to some degree, and a lot of other things that lead to a performance of any player. So, how many quarterbacks went through the whole season and had that completely consistent season? One or two. Maybe they're both playing in [the Super Bowl]. So, that's what we need out of Joe, and that's what we're building towards. And to me, it's kind of a two-rail attack; we've got, on one hand, do everything we can do to continue to grow Joe as a football player. And that plan is in motion right now. It goes from Steve [Bisciotti] – Steve is a part of that – Ozzie [Newsome], Dick [Cass] is a part of that, through Jim Zorn and Cam Cameron and myself. And that's all of our responsibility, to build that plan up for the offseason to help him grow as a player. But, I think you have to look at Joe's progress and say he's pretty much on track. But there is a lot of room to grow into, and Joe is committed to doing that. And then do everything we can to put the best players around him, like you always do with every position. We attack that with a great enthusiasm, which is what we're going to do. So, we make him better, put the best players around him we can and then make him the best player he can be in year three. That's what our job is."

Is there any update on the retirement talks for S Ed Reed and WR Derrick Mason?
(HARBAUGH) "We kind of addressed this at the last [press conference], but I know both of those guys love football, and they both want to play. So, as far as Ed, I've said this before, and Ed knows it… Ed is going to hear me say it, and maybe he'd say something different, but I believe Ed is going to play next year. Then again, if he decides – and it's his choice – that's something he's got to decide for himself. If he doesn't [return to play], we'll have to have a plan in place to move on. But we just had our discussions about Ed; there is no better leader, there is no better football player, there is no better guy on our team than Ed Reed, and we need him back. He's a huge part of our puzzle, and I would say the same thing about Derrick. That depends on contract things and where he's at as far as his career, but we're going to try to do everything we can to get Derrick back. I'm a coach – you want as many good players as you can possibly get, and those are two really good players. And I'm kind of somewhat counting on them right now as we go forward."

Are you concerned at all with QB Troy Smith and his agent complaining about the lack of playing time and requesting a trade?
(NEWSOME) "About Troy and the agent supposedly asking to be traded; I think I have pretty good communications around the league. I think the majority of the people know who the general manager of the Baltimore Ravens is. I have not heard from his agent. And I know who his agent is personally, so I have not heard that. Now, when it comes to trading any player, I think we're open to it. You know, we're open to making our football team better, and that's where the four of us… If we get something, or some team calls us and is willing to make us an offer for basically any player – we'll sit there and listen to it, and then we'll talk about it. And if there is an opportunity for us to improve our team by trading away a player, which will allow us to get another player, then we'll do it."

For Ozzie, are you tired of always being asked about the wide receiver position, and would you consider trading a No. 1 draft pick for a premier wide receiver?
(NEWSOME) "You know, having sat here for 14 years, I think every year I've come in here [and] there has been some need that we needed. When we first got here, to Baltimore, we couldn't play defense. I mean, we could light it up, and we couldn't stop water when it came to playing defense. (laughter) So, we put a concerted effort into building a defense that some people say may go down to be one of the best defenses in the history of our game. So, now then, what else is next? We [didn't] have an offensive line, and now you look at our offensive line, and we've got youth, we've got depth, and they're pretty good. [Then] quarterback – each year it's going to be something, and that's a challenge that my staff and the coaches, we look forward to. Yeah, it's a challenge for us to continue to meet those needs, but I can say that we need a playmaker outside, yes, but we need some other things to help us to make sure that we can compete to be in the Super Bowl, also. But, if we're able to answer that question, then you'll be standing here next year saying we need something else. And I'm going to go, 'Yes, we do.'"

Would you consider trading a No. 1 draft pick for a premier receiver?
(NEWSOME) "You know, like I said, I leave myself open to anything. And we just spent two great days with Steve [Bisciotti], and Steve will probably tell you, I kept saying, 'Let's keep our options open on anything.' If we can improve our football team, then we will do it, but we have a process in place. Now, I'm not going to bore you with the process, but if there is an opportunity for us to do it in that manner, [then] yes, we will. I want to win, just like you guys want to win."

(BISCIOTTI) "When you talk about the weaknesses of our team, it's safe to say that most of you watch enough football to know who the best in every position is, across the league. You can spell them out if we said corners, and then safeties and down the line. At $125 million, if we wanted to get a guy in the top 10 at his position, in every position, it would cost us $200 million. I'm not allowed to do that. But that's really what it would take to get to the point where you all felt that we had a great linebacker corps, a great defensive line, a great defensive backfield, great receivers. So, no matter what city you're in, they're showing up in different places. We've always had a great defense, and we've got to be careful that we don't run out and fill all of those holes and just create them somewhere else. We went from 2,900 [total] yards [on offense] to 3,600 yards this year, and if Joe [Flacco] is on pace, maybe we go to 4,100. And I think there were 10 quarterbacks this year that threw for 4,000 yards. We'd certainly like him to be there; how we get there is a different story. You all know football well enough to know that everything is relative, and we can't have even the top half of every position in the league. So, it's all going to be dead middle. And so we're going to have guys that are at the top 10 of the 32 out there, and in the middle and in the bottom. And like [Ozzie] said, that's just our goal, is to fill all those spots."

Do you feel that this team is a player or two away from being in the Super Bowl?
(BISCIOTTI) "They say that's fool's gold, right? I mean, that you get caught up in that you're one or two players away. But the answer is, if we win a Super Bowl next year, then Ozzie will probably say that we were those two players away from it. When you look back at Sam Adams and Shannon Sharpe, I would say that those were the couple of pieces that got us over the hump in 2000. So, stay tuned, and if we win, then we'll tell you the guys that were the difference makers in getting us there."

In regards to the CBA, what can you say to the people in Baltimore who scrape together dollars to support the team, and who can't understand how so much money can't be divided to the contingent of parties involved?
(BISCIOTTI) "You know, as far as the fans go, I know that… This is a horrible part of any business, but when you have fans involved that are committed to it, then yes, I'm sensitive to it. But I've got partners out there right now whose teams are making less money than their linebackers. And so, I think we've got an acute problem here with the general profitability of the teams. We always knew this was not a big cash flow business, but when you've got guys like Jacksonville [Jaguars] tarping up 10,000 seats to stop blackouts, when you've got teams that are voluntarily staying at the minimum of what they have to spend on the salary cap in order to not go upside down financially, then we already have a structural problem. So, I don't expect the fans to take… I don't know what side that the fans are going to take. You know, three years ago if we hadn't done the deal, we would have forced the players to strike. And you would argue that then the fans would take their anger out on the players. We did a deal, and we did a bad deal, and we didn't understand it at the level that we needed to, and the implications that it was going to have. And obviously by the time we did [realize the implications], we were already into the deal. So, that puts us in the unenviable position of this thing ending in a lockout as opposed to a strike. And I certainly bet that most of the anger is going to go towards the owners. But, I've seen the St. Louis [Rams] up for sale for a year and a half, and I think they started at $900 million. I think that they're now looking at somebody to buy them for $600 million, and the reason is because there's no cash flow. So, if we don't get this thing back to the point that the teams can all cash flow enough, that they can go into a bank and look at a statement and say, 'That's a solidly-run business,' – not team – then there are long-term problems for the league. And unfortunately, we're going to have to address that, and it's going to cause some pain for a lot of us, maybe."

How is business for the Ravens?
(CASS) "In terms of the Baltimore Ravens, in terms of where we are in business, we're doing fine. We've been able to sell all of our tickets, we've been able to sell our suites, [and] sponsorship dollars are basically flat. So, we're doing well compared to other teams around the league. But again, I'm focusing on revenues, not expenses. Just because we're still doing well in revenues doesn't mean we're generating a lot of profit, because we do spend a lot of money as well."

On what level of agreement are you and the other NFL owners with this possibly being an uncapped season?
(BISCIOTTI) "I can't speak to the other guys. All I know is that we needed 24 votes to opt out of the deal. If you look at baseball, where the [New York] Yankees have three times the payroll of the [Baltimore] Orioles, and the [Boston] Red Sox have two times, or plus, the payroll of the Orioles, there's a… It certainly doesn't show up in the standings, because if I'm a Yankees fan, I'd be upset we're not winning 130 games with the roster that they have and the money that they pay out. I think it's a disgrace that they only beat the average team by 10 games in the standings for three times the money. I'd fire that [General Manager]. (laughter) You don't need a GM, all you've got to do is go buy the Cy Young Award winner every year, no matter where he shows up. I don't think that if some teams spend 25 percent more than another team, that it's necessarily going to buy a championship. Again, it comes down to the draft picks and – where baseball does it – the good teams like Oakland that get the draft picks and then trade them when they're at the highest value to restock their farm system. That's what we're trying to avoid here when we go into this thing to try and restructure the league. We want to be at a point where teams are not selling off their star player in their fourth year because they can't afford to sign them to their second contract. Getting guys, drafting them, [helping] them [become] good [players] and then being able to sign them to that second contract is something that we want all the teams to still have the ability to do."

How did this year's rookie class perform, specifically T Michael Oher and CB Lardarius Webb? Did they meet your expectations?
(HARBAUGH) "Well, I think those two guys, specifically, exceeded them. To me, everybody in here would probably agree with that, no questions about it. Michael Oher is just a great guy and, you know what, as we talked about it, there's a lot of room for him to grow and become a better player, and he will. Lardarius is obviously dealing with the knee injury right now, but he's been in here every day. It took us a few weeks to get him on the field, and when we thought he was ready to play the way he did, we got him out there. Paul Kruger, we said this before, I'm convinced Paul Kruger is going to be a really good player. Paul needs to put some weight on, get in that weight room and go to work, and he's committed to doing that. I'm sure he will. We're going to have a close eye on him in there, for sure. He'll be becoming that guy that we want him to be on the edge of the defense. Even if you look down the line – a guy like Jason Phillips is going to be coming back [from injury]. Davon Drew, he's going to be a good player, we think. Those are kind of developmental guys. Just from a coaching standpoint, I compliment Ozzie [Newsome] and his guys. I think the last two drafts have built the foundation of a football team underneath some really good veteran players, and we kind of go from there."

What is your philosophy with players who have had off-field issues and so-called character problems?
(BISCIOTTI) "I think that we're pretty good consensus builders. I think that we trust each other enough, and I think that we all… On any given day you could walk into that [meeting] room, and I'd be in the risk–taking mood, and a week later it might be John [Harbaugh]. And Oz, I think you made a move for Terrell Owens a few years back, didn't you? (Ozzie Newsome nods his head.) These kids are under so much scrutiny, and we're talking about 53 of them that you have to put together. You're not going to have 53 angels, and you probably wouldn't have a very good team if you had 53 angels. I think the kind of problems that they've had matter more. Certainly, the repeat problems you better avoid. I don't think that mistakes are necessarily a sign of poor character. I think repeating mistakes is the closest sign to bad character that you can look at. I would say that, maybe of the four of us, I'm probably the biggest risk taker even though… I like the fact that these guys care about our image, and they pull me back from the rail, because I'm ready to take chances on people. I really am. I think that's kind of what life is about, and I think there are opportunities like that.

I hope we're in a position someday where someone wants to dump a Randy Moss for a fourth-round draft pick, because I'll be in there saying, 'We've got to take a chance.' It's about what you have to lose if that person fails you. So, I think it's risk and return."

John [Harbaugh], are you adverse to risk in terms of personnel decisions?
(HARBAUGH) "It's a great question, you try to get a gauge, but no, I think it goes down to risk and reward. So, you basically take a guy… Now, if you rule somebody out because – in your opinion – they're bad for your team, but in our conversations, I don't know if we've ever discussed a guy that we just said, 'We want no part of this guy.' I can't remember a guy we've talked about in the last two years that we said that about. Maybe I'm forgetting somebody, but I don't think so. So, it just becomes how much do you risk, how much do you take away from other opportunities to build your team for this guy? If you've put a lot into this guy – a first-round pick, two first picks, a first and a third – for a really good player on your team – and you lose those two picks, and you bring this guy in, and then he doesn't produce for you because he messed up and makes a mistake; now you become a worse team. If the reward matches the risk, you kind of balance it out, and you take a shot, because the bottom line, to make your team better – but also to represent the city well… And most of these guys that get to the NFL, in the end, they have their issues, but they're still pretty good people. You don't get to this level without fundamentally being pretty solid, overall."

What are your thoughts about the way OLB Terrell Suggs played this year after signing him to a pricey contract?
(BISCIOTTI) "Well, I'm not a personnel guy. I thought Terrell was coming into his own when he got hurt. I think he came in out of shape, and we now have him for the offseason. So, that's going to say everything. He's still a dominant player. I think that we've got him in the direction that we want to get him back to, and he's still very young. We're lucky to have a guy with that much experience. Not many 26-year-olds have 60-something sacks behind him, so I think he's going to do fine."

How important is it for Terrell Suggs to be a part of the offseason training program?
(HARBAUGH) "Well, I think that it's really important that he's here. We've had that conversation. It's my understanding that he feels like it's really important to be here. To get in the kind of world-class shape that he wants to get into, that we need him to get into, we think here is the place for him, by far, to be. Also, to be a leader, to be up in front of those guys and be leading those workouts, that's important. But also, to really develop your skills, especially as a pass rusher, you can really work on those things in the offseason. And because of his contract issues, I think he's wanted to be here, but has been unable to be here for the most part. Then he came to camp last year ready to go to work, and got hurt right away, and missed all of training camp. To me, it's vitally important that he's here, and we plan on him being here."

What worries you about an uncapped year and improving the team?
(NEWSOME) "Well, it really doesn't, because when there are restrictions put on the Baltimore Ravens, they're put on 31 other ball clubs too. But I think when those restrictions are put there, that challenges my staff and John's staff to be better. We've got to be better than the other 31 clubs in order to make our football team better under these circumstances. So, I look at it as a challenge. We came back from the Labor Seminar, and the first thing John heard was, 'We're going to get into the final eight, and we're not going to be able to get a UFA.' And we all kind of looked at each other [and said], 'How nice would that be?' No. 1, getting into the final eight, that's what we wanted to do, but it puts the pressure on us to be able to dig down deep and still be able to improve that football team. I think that's why [director of player personnel] Eric [DeCosta], and [director of college scouting] Joe [Hortiz], and [east area scout] Joe [Douglas] and all of the other scouts, I think that's why they come to work every day; because you know what, 'I can be better than the norm, and we can dig deep.'"

What are your thoughts on the pass interference rule and how there is such a grey area when officials call pass interference?
(NEWSOME) "I'll open up this question with: 'Did you think the Pro Bowl was a good game?' They say fans like that. (laughter) I don't know, but to be a little bit more serious, having been on the committee for at least over a dozen years, what we try to do is draw a bright line. You saw it with the force out. We had no issues with the force out because we came back and said, 'If you don't get two feet in, you're out.' It took the subjection, or the judgment of the official, out of the game. You either had to have two feet in, or it was out. I think that's what we're going to try to head to with pass interference. We have to draw a bright line so that the players, coaches and even the fans understand what pass interference is. Right now, I don't think it's there. John and I have had a conversation about this every other day, and he's on the phone with [NFL V.P. of officiating] Mike Pereira, and now we've got Carl [Johnson] coming in, and we'll probably be on the phone with him. I think, we on the [competition] committee, we need to draw a bright line, so everybody understands exactly what the penalty is, and then we can all sit there and say, 'That is interference or that is not interference.' We cannot have 12 [officiating] crews that see it differently. So, I think there is some work to be done. Is it going to get cleared up in one year? I don't know, but I think we're going to push it in that direction."

How do you evaluate the WRs performance this year, and do you want to improve at that position?
(NEWSOME) "To answer the second part [of the question], yes. Do we want to improve at the wide receiver position? Yes, because I think that will further enhance our running game. I think having a playmaker on the outside will help Joe Flacco become a better quarterback. So, those things are very in place. You know what, Dick [Cass] gave us a stat down in Florida that we finished ninth in points [scored]. I didn't realize that. So, we can score some points, but we want to be better. We've got to get better, because if we ever get involved in a shootout, I want to win the shootout. We don't want to have the Pro Bowl game, but if we ever get involved in that, I want to be able to win a game like that. And I want to be able to win a 6-0 game too. That's my goal."

On the defensive side, will there be more of an emphasis on pass rush in the offseason?
(HARBAUGH) "I'd say, yes. No question about it. To me, we want more sacks. We want more quarterbacks tagged right in the chest. We want to knock those guys down as much as we can. I think you see it in the last weekend of football; that's what wins football games on defense and takes pressure off of the secondary. That's a big point of emphasis for us. Again, as a coaching staff, we want to make our guys better, the guys we've got, throughout the offseason. And then we want to add guys that can do that. The same thing with the wide receivers... Those guys play individually very well, as well as they could. It's our job to put the whole thing together and make the whole group as good as we can. That's what we want to do at every position."

From your perspective, what can be done to eliminate the "Cleveland blockade" and get [Ravens minority owner Art] Modell nominated to be in the Hall of Fame?

(NEWSOME) "I think there is a movement in the city of Cleveland that is changing what people think of Mr. Modell. There have been former players that have called me personally and wanted me to address Mr. Modell about a willingness to do anything that they could do to help in promoting him to get to the Hall of Fame. I don't know what it is going to take. I wish I… If I knew, I would have had it done five years ago. I don't know. But I do know this, you guys are around those scribes. When we are in the playoffs, the majority of those voters are there. If you would take some of your time to talk to the guys that are on that voting committee… I got the opportunity in New England. I could look in that press box, and there were a number of those voters there. You're asking us to do our part, are you doing your part? There's a part that you can do also to help us to bridge that gap to honor a man that needs to be honored in Canton."

Has there been any talk about tweaking or changing the conduct policy now that it has been in place for a few years?
(BISCOTTI) "I think, in general, all the owners are happy that Roger [Goodell] came in and turned up the heat a little bit. I think that we've been fortunate as a team… I think punishments should be severe because I think that… I hope that Roger continues to be tough on all the issues like that. The [NFL Players] Union is going to have their say on that in these [Collective Bargain Agreement] talks, and it's going to be one of the peripheral issues other than the actual financial structure of things. I assume that it's going to be addressed. But Roger is not backing down on this one. If he does not have the power to do the things that he has done, then I think we're all worse off because of it. I salute him for getting tougher, and I hope he continues to get tougher. I think that it gives these coaches, all the way down to the high school level, a hammer for helping guide these kids from the time that they're stars in high school to being the big man on campus. I hope it filters down into the colleges, and the colleges get tougher and start suspending these guys that embarrass the rest of the team. That's the one thing that, if you ever came from a big family – which I didn't, I only had a brother and sister – but anybody that came from a big family, boy, if you messed up, it was the last name that your father impressed upon you. It wasn't your first name, because you were representing seven other people, and you had an obligation to them. That's what's happening here is that we've got 99 percent of these guys who are wonderful people. [There are] 1,800 of them [players] in the league that we're proud to be associated with. It takes, what, 18-20 arrests a year to make them look like a bunch of outlaws. It's really unfair to the ones that do it right and lead their lives the way that we're proud of. So yeah, I think we have to learn to do without that one, two percent of guys and suspend them for a year instead of four games, and I think they'll get the message."

In the uncapped year, is there any fear from your group of owners ("the more competitive owners") that some teams will slash payroll and disrupt the competitive balance in the league?
(BISCOTTI) "I think it would be short lived. I think the teams that would have to do that would figure out the best way to trim their payroll. Every year there are eight bad teams across the league. If that's the reason, then it will be a short lived, it will be a one-year thing. I'm hoping that we avoid the lockout all together. It certainly is an issue, and we're being driven to that anyway. There are some teams that are spending the minimum that they have to spend and whether they go $10 million below that, I don't know if it would show up as teams that can't compete. The teams that end up 1-15, like the Rams this year, it wasn't a payroll issue. There might be a couple of outliers on the topside and a couple on the bottom, but I think that you can pretty much count on 28 teams competing for those 12 playoff spots even in an uncapped year."

What will happen with the team going from a capped year to an uncapped year and then possibly a capped year again?
(NEWSOME) "That's a good question. We've probably spent maybe two hours just dealing with those issues yesterday with our group. Dealing with the restricted guys, which we are kind of at the advantage with, but those guys could eventually become unrestricted and how to deal with it. But, I think what we've seen in the past – and this is where personnel, cap accounting, a good owner and a good coach all coming together – is that we can't be afraid to let Bart Scott walk out the door and hope that Tavares Gooden or [Dannell] Ellerbe or [Jameel] McClain can replace him. We can't be afraid of that. But we also have to be smart enough to know that there are going to be some opportunities that we can extend some guys and take them out of the unrestricted game, and we can have them for four or five years. That's a balance that we are going to be dealing with over the course of the next four or five months. Because if we get a deal done, then it's going to impact like 200 or something players. Like Steve [Bisciotti] said, we have like 10 of them. And we've got to be prepared to be able to extend some or to be able to say, 'OK, we might have to let this one go, because we've got a young player that has to step in and play.' We're playing that game in our mind right now, and like I keep saying, other than losing on Sunday, I have a fun job. But that makes our job fun to sit there and do what we did yesterday for a couple of hours to talk about today and tomorrow. And that's the way we have to do it. But you can only do it when you have a head coach in the game with you."

(BISCIOTTI) "I'll say if we're going from an uncapped year into a capped situation in 2011, then it's the league's responsibility to make sure that the teams have a soft landing. That will be the last major negotiating point, I guess, is exactly how the rosters are affected in that transition back into a cap. They could restrict movement for awhile to give you exclusive rights for one more year or stagger them depending on who lost the most and if there was indeed a lockout year of 2011, but for the most part if we go into a capped year, the league is already aware that things that we do to protect ourselves now will not come back and haunt us when we hit the ground running again with the new cap."

What do you like most about this team and what drove you crazy?
(BISCIOTTI) "You know, as an owner, you'd love for your team to be the least-penalized team in the league. I'm certainly not happy about it, I'm not going to lie to you. Because it's opportunities, and to see the flow of the game stop because of penalties, I don't think it's just yards. It's trying to make these young guys understand that springing a guy for a 50-yard punt return by blocking some guy in the back, is not worth it. And we've got to address it. John [Harbaugh] and Ozzie [Newsome] and Dick [Cass] and I, we've talked about it. That's something that if you looked at the end of the year I think, 10 of the top 14 penalized teams were 10 of the 12 playoff teams. So there really isn't a correlation between penalties or lack of penalties and success. But specific penalties at specific times of the game, yes, some of it is weeding out some players who refuse to practice their technique and find themselves in those positions. I'd be the happiest guy in the world if we were 15th in the league in penalties, but we play an aggressive style of defense, and I really don't anticipate, nor do I care, if we're ever the least-penalized team. But I certainly hope we're not one of the top-penalized teams, that goes without saying."

JOHN HARBAUGH: SEASON-ENDING PRESS CONFERENCE

Opening Statement: "Thanks for coming. I'm excited to talk about our guys and our coaches and our season a little bit and field your questions about where we've been and where we are going. I want to thank you guys first. If you don't mind, I'd like to go through a couple things: I want to thank you all who cover our team. I just look at all the faces, all you great ladies and gentlemen, what you do all year and all your professionalism and enthusiasm [for] the job you do. I know it's tough. Sometimes it's tough prying information out of us, but we appreciate it, and we even appreciate all of the opinions. It all goes together – the fans and the media, and really, the players and people in the organization, to helping us build what we're trying to build here. We listen and we read, and I think it's just a good dialogue, so we appreciate that.

"I want to thank our fans. We have great fans at home and away. When you hear the 'Oooooooo' [from the National Anthem] in Indianapolis as loud we heard it, I got fired up. And then New England and even in Oakland, we had a bunch of fans. And here – we talk about the purple wall on all four sides – I just think it's a fabulous sports city, it's a fabulous fan base. We want to keep growing it as much as we can, and we want to put a football team and organization out there that the fans are proud of and they want to be associated with. We have got a great bunch of fans.

"I really like the makeup of our team. If you look at where we're at going forward – we talked to our team a lot about this on Monday – but I like the makeup of our team. I like the foundation we have on our football team. I like the kind of guys we have – our organization, our front office, our personnel department, our coaching staff, our ownership. You just can't find a better group in the National Football League. That's cause for tremendous optimism going forward. We've said before that it's our goal to build something here that will be remembered for a long time to come, and that means winning championships, wining multiple championships. To do that, you've got to make the playoffs to have a chance to win championships. I'm proud of what our team and our coaches have accomplished in the last two years in terms of making the playoffs and giving ourselves a chance to win championships. That's big, and that's something we intend to do. We want to build the kind of team where we do that for a long time going forward. And it's one year, it's two years, it's building from there, three years and on out. [When] you put yourself in the playoffs, you always have a shot. I think that's something you start with, and that's something we have been able to do the last two years, and I'm really proud our players got that done. We had an elimination game out in Oakland, and we won it. We had a playoff game on the road in New England against the team of the decade, and we won it. And we went to Indianapolis, and our guys fought from beginning to end, and we didn't win it. We had three turnovers, obviously, on the road against the No. 1 seed, and that makes it tough. But our guys executed, they played hard, and they played well, and that game was a very close, hard-fought game, probably more so than the score indicated. I'm excited about our guys and what they accomplished this year.

"I think we have to develop. When you look at our team, we have to develop our current players. There are two ways to get better: You develop the players you have, and from a personnel standpoint, you always seek to bring in guys that can add to what you're doing. That's the draft, that's free agency, that's from guys who get let go by other teams. It's guys like Kelley Washington, who you bring in and look at, and they turn out to have a great season for you. I think our coaches and personnel staff do a great job of scouring every opportunity to bring in players who can help us be better. And we've had good drafts. If you can bring in two, three or four guys from every draft that are the kind of players we've brought in the last couple years, you're going to continue to get better as a football team.

"Just [to go over] the three phases real quick: Offensively, we've built a real good foundation. We talked Day One here, way back when, about building a football team from the inside out. We start in the trenches. Remember that? I see we're in the process of doing that. I like where we stand in the trenches, without question, and we're going to continue to build that and develop those young players. And when you work your way out, we've got a lot of good players in all spots. We've got a good mix of young players, a good mix of veteran players, and we're going to keep adding players into that mix. But offensively, I think we've done that. We've got a young quarterback, we've got a young offensive line, we've got some guys back outside that are some restricted guys that we have a chance to bring back. We have a tremendous group of running backs. I think we have a foundation for the kind of offense we want to build here.

"Defensively, the defense has been good here for a long period of time. I think it was exceptional again this year. I think the transition between changing coordinators to Greg Mattison that we had to do this year, as the year went on, went really well. I'm excited about what our defense did this year – the kind of defense we put on the field. I love our defensive mentality.

"And then special teams, we brought in Brendon Ayanbadejo [in 2008], and that was it. We took a lot of young players and developed them from two years ago until now. I think you saw that process unfold. We've got a heck of a special teams unit, and it's only going to get better because all those young guys are going to be back. So, that's kind of where we're at in all three phases. We'll continue to be the kind of football team that we want to be. We're going to be a rough, tough, disciplined, hardnosed, clean-playing football team. That's what we're all about from beginning to end. And I think we keep chasing those goals, and you see those things express themselves on the field."

How impatient is everyone getting with trying to win a championship? "I think patience is important. It's tough to win in this league. That's the beautiful thing about the National Football League: When you go into the season, there are 32 teams that expect to win the championship, and that's our goal, no less. But at the same time, you've got to understand it's a process. It's a challenging thing, and when it happens, it's going to be something we're all going to celebrate and be excited about. But there's no timeframe on any of that. I think we've all got a great vision. I think our players and our coaches and our organization… It starts with Steve Bisciotti and it goes right through the organization. I mean, he establishes the vision for this organization. He establishes the kind of football team that he wants to see on the field and the kind of organization he wants built. I think all of us, that's kind of our job and our responsibility to do everything we can to make that happen. And we're in the process of doing that, and I think it expresses itself every day in so many ways. You talk to our players, you talk to our coaches, you see what kind of people they are and you see how they compete. We know what that championship team is going to look like, and when it happens, we're going to be excited about it. And it's going to happen, but there's no way we can say when."

What progress did you see QB Joe Flacco make this year and were there any areas you thought he should have made more progress? "Again, I think the idea of putting expectations… When you say we're going to be at this point, at this time, it's impossible to do that. And it's fruitless, and really it's a mistake. Joe got better in so many ways, and there are so many ways he can get better. And there are so many ways we can help him be better from a coaching standpoint, from a personnel standpoint and from a developmental standpoint. So, we're going to go to work on March 15. Joe is going to come back here. He's going to work on getting stronger, quicker, more explosive. Fundamentally, he's going to work on throwing to receivers every single day and develop the kind of chemistry you want to have with those guys, and he's going to continue to grow. Second year to third year, I expect him to make some more progress, but I would say he's on schedule."

Do you understand the fans feeling like there was a "disconnect" amongst the offense around Week 5 and what remained throughout the season? "No, but you can explain it to me. What does that mean, disconnect?"

A disconnect, meaning how the offense was much more aggressive for about the first quarter of the season: "Well, it's funny, because you get the same criticism that we've got to run the ball more, we've got to throw the ball more… I think that criticism – so to speak – comes from every direction. And I think as a coach, or as a player or as an organization, you listen to advisors and advice. Critics – it doesn't mean much, because that comes from every single direction."

Not to use it as criticism, but speaking in terms of a "disconnect" from what people saw in the first quarter of the season and then what they saw for the rest of the year: "I think that we, offensively, are trying to develop the kind of offense that can win in any environment, in any circumstance, against any defense. And that's a challenge. And you do that by, you kind of mesh the players that you have at this time to the opponent you're facing in that particular week, and you do the best job you can to score points. And that's a challenge every single week. Sometimes you get it done, and sometimes you don't. That's part of the process, but we need to be able to run the ball, we need to be able to throw the ball, we need to be aggressive across the board. We need to be able to spread the ball around, get the ball to all of our receivers in different situations, run the ball inside and outside, throw the ball down the field, and from sideline to sideline and over the middle. And that takes time to develop that. It has to do with the quarterback, it has to do with the offensive line, it has to do with the guys you put out there outside. It has to do with teaching the system over time and adding to it. So, I think that's a work in progress, and that's something that we're developing."

Are there any moments that leave a lasting impression in your memory about the 2009 season? "The moments that I would have that leave an impression about 2009 are moments with guys. Standing in front of this room when the team is sitting in here, and some of the most difficult times – maybe when we're .500 – and some of the talk is raging, and our guys, shoulder to shoulder, have each other's back saying the right things about one another, taking responsibility for trying to improve and become a better football team. I think that's what we're founded on. You talk about a culture, you talk about a way of doing things, a team mindset. That's what I'm most proud of, and I think our fans can see that. I think our fans can see the kind of a group of men and an organization and a team that we're building and what we're going to be founded on. And that's what I take the most pride in."

What is your level of optimism with S Ed Reed and WR Derrick Mason coming back for another year? "Well, as far as Ed and Derrick, I can't speak for those two guys. They're capable, and they have to speak for themselves along those lines. I read what they said, but I know those two guys love football. And I've had a chance to talk to both of those guys since, and I got the impression that they love football and that they want to play. So, we'll see how that shakes out, but Derrick is a different situation. He's an unrestricted free agent. We have to see how that plays out over the next couple of months. We've told Derrick that we want him back, we want him on this football team, and we're going to do everything we can to keep him on this football team for next year. Ed Reed, obviously, is a different situation contractually, but Ed knows that we want him back, and that I want him back. He's a huge part of our defense. He's a very important player – not just from a football ability standpoint, but from a leadership standpoint – on this team. He's a premier player in the National Football League, and we want him back. And right now, I expect them both to be back, but we'll just have to see how that plays out, and ultimately, it's going to be up to them."

How do you think you did this year in your second season as a head coach, and how do you clean up in some of the areas that need work, like minimizing penalty yardage? "We talk about that every single week. You try to make your team as good as you can make it every single day. That's what coaches do. You coach guys when they walk into the building, you coach guys when they walk out of the building. It's a relationship, it's coaching technique, it's coaching decision-making, it's coaching scheme, it's all those things. So, you do the best job that you can. We'll leave you to do the evaluating. You can put an 'A' or a 'B' or a 'C' on it or whatever you want. But I like our team, and I like the way they play. And all the things that I think you saw through the course of the season that we struggled with at times, we improved on. And you move those things forward and you just keep building on all the aspects that you need to do to become a better football team."

Do you anticipate any changes on your coaching staff? "Well, I think it'll be interesting to see. We've got great coaches, so it's a great question, and I think that guys are going to have opportunities, probably, to do some things – to move up and improve their position professionally and have some more responsibility. And if that happens, we'll be really happy for them, but right now, we don't have anything brewing right now."

What is your take on the wide receiver position, and what do you think will happen throughout the offseason? "We're going to do everything we can to make our team better, and that goes for the wide receiver position just like it goes for the defensive back position. You put a level of priority on different positions, so we've got a plan that way. We've got an idea and a direction we want to go, for sure. I think we've got to put as many good players around Joe Flacco as we possibly can. That's going to be important. But we've got good players, and a lot of that is bringing guys back. Some of those guys you're talking about at receiver are restricted free agents, so we have an opportunity to bring those guys back, and we certainly plan to do that. And then if we can add more players into the mix, build the competition, and let the best guys win their jobs, or their catches, or their opportunities – that's what we're really all about."

With the uncertainty with the NFL and CBA, how much extra work do you have to do to figure out what your roster is going to look like if there is a capped year or an uncapped year next season? "Well, yeah, that's the question. You go under a set of assumptions right now that there's going to be an uncapped year, and that's how we're moving forward. And if something gets resolved, then that's going to change, and we've got a contingency plan. So, I think Ozzie [Newsome], and Dick Cass and the rest of our personnel group do a great job of that, and I'll be involved in that. Our plan right now, I think, is probably to keep as many of our players in place as we possibly can, first. That's where you start. We've got good players. Some of these guys who are unrestricted are going to have opportunities to move on. Others are restricted, and we want to keep as many of our players in place as we can. And then you look outward, see who's available around the league that you might be able to add, and then you go to the draft. And then you continue on after that, see who's available, who gets released, or whatever, and you're always working the roster. So, to me, that's 365 days a year."

Now that you can reflect a little, what are your thoughts on the season that RB Ray Rice had? "Ray Rice had a Pro Bowl season, obviously, and I think he's fulfilled – and maybe even exceeded – any hopes that we had for him in his second year. But yet, we thought he was going to be a heck of a player. So, I just love his work ethic, I love his mindset, I love the way he plays hard every single play, but I also think he can get better. And from this year, until next year, there are a lot of areas he can improve on, and he's going to go to work to do that. That's just the kind of guy he is."

Is it a challenge, with being a top eight team, going into next year with the possibility of an uncapped year? "Well, yeah, there's a balancing act there, because there aren't going to be as many opportunities for the top eight teams to sign unrestricted free agents. By the same token, there aren't going to be as many unrestricted free agents available as there would have been under the old system. So, I'm not sure how many free agents are really going to be out there. We kind of know who those guys are right now. If we lose a guy, then we can sign a guy. But we'll set our sights on the guys that we have an opportunity to acquire."

Have you given Flacco a workout plan for the time period before he comes back on March 15? "Well, we've got a specific work plan for all of our guys, just in terms of staying fit and staying in shape that Bob Rogucki, our strength and conditioning coach, has provided to those guys. But individual coaches and coordinators have plans for different guys, and Joe's our quarterback, so we've got some ideas for him."

What is your level of optimism that the players on Injured Reserve can be back participating in training camp? "I really haven't thought about the majority or minority of guys, but I think specifically, there's not too many of those guys that won't be back for training camp, if any. It just depends on how they progress. We expect to get a number of those guys back for OTAs, and even some of them back for March 15 when we start the program. So, we had a number of guys on IR, not as many as last year, which was an improvement, but we've done a good job of working through injuries and plugging the next player in there and still being very competitive as a football team. But that's kind of exciting too when you look at your roster, and all of the sudden you take those guys and plug them back into the depth chart and you see the competition you're going to have for training camp. So, that's a good place to start."

Will going to the Senior Bowl and watching that benefit the team in terms of the draft? "Well, that's a plus. I don't think it's a must. It's not like you have to be there, because you get the tapes of all the practices. But, there is a benefit in standing on the sideline and watching an inside run drill and seeing how a player really competes – just kind of feeling the player. A defensive back in a one-on-one drill, a wide receiver in a one-on-one drill – when you're on that sideline that close to them, you have a little better sense maybe than you would have on tape. So, it will be a plus for us."

Have you recognized anything you would like to do differently going into this offseason and next year? "Absolutely. We talked to all our guys, and it starts with all of us, it starts with ourselves. I think that's something we'll be able to do in the next couple of weeks, but I try to do that every single day. So, when the season is over, it's something you've thought about every single day through the whole season. What could I have done better in that meeting, or what could we have done better with that game plan, or how could we have expressed this better to our guys? How can we coach that technique better? How can we put our offense, defense and special teams together better? [How can we] put the roster together better? I think that's an ongoing deal, and if you're not doing that, if you're not trying to get better every single day, then you're obviously getting worse and people are going to pass you up. So yeah, that's very important."

Do you anticipate any roster decisions being textured, as last year's decision about K Matt Stover was? "Well, again, [that's an] esoteric question. I'm not an esoteric kind of guy, so if you want to be specific, throw it at me. I think we've got some pretty straight-forward personnel decisions, but I think the Matt Stover decision, to be honest with you, was very straight forward."

Going forward, do you see K Billy Cundiff still being in the mix, or will there be a competition for the kicking position next season? "Sure, yeah, we want to have the best kicker in here that we can, and we're certainly not opposed to having two guys kick. If it's a kickoff guy and a field goal guy – whatever's best for our situation, that's what we're going to do. We said from the beginning… I can kind of go back through that if you want me to… We've said from the beginning that we would rather have a guy that kicks off and does field goals because our punter is not a kickoff guy, and you'd like to have two guys in those spots. But we've proven we'll have three guys in there and be very happy with it, and that's a possibility going forward. So, if you're asking me about Matt coming back, sure, Matt's a possibility coming back. That could work out that way. Billy Cundiff, I think, is a big possibility for us. He proved that he could make field goals under pressure situations. He kicked off very well. I think he improved some things coming here. He'll be the first to tell you [he improved on] some mechanical things that he worked through when he first got here. Through the season, he's gotten better as a kicker, as a field goal kicker especially, and as a kickoff guy. There's going to be guys in the draft that we're going to look at. We want to have the very best kicking situation that we possibly can, just like we wanted to have the best situation last year that we possibly could."

Why would you be willing to bring Stover back after releasing him last season? "Why wouldn't I? We want to have the best team we can. So, if that ends up being our best option, we'll do it. We're not… I guess the point I'm making is we don't rule anything out. Anything we can do to make our team better, we want to do it. He's a great guy and good person and a heck of a kicker, and that may work out. But it may not. So, that's what we've got to find out over the next couple months. We're just going to do everything we can, personnel wise, to make our team as good as we possibly can. That's what we owe the fans, and we owe the players, the coaches and everybody else."

Do you see a lot more football in DE Trevor Pryce's future? "Yeah, Trevor can still play – no question about it. Trevor had a great year. I think he's been our leading sack guy for the last five years and our leading sack guy this year. So, Trevor can still rush the passer, he's a solid run defender, he's a tremendous leader, and he knows the defense inside and out. Trevor's got a few more years left in him, no doubt."

How has the D-line progressed throughout the season, and is it important to keep that group together for next season? "Well, we're going to try to keep them all together. That's our goal. Obviously, we've got some guys who are unrestricted – Dwan Edwards is unrestricted and Justin Bannan is unrestricted. So, we're going to try to keep those guys here. We're going to make a big push to do it. We want to keep that group intact. We've got some young guys – [Brandon] McKinney, [Lamar] Divens and [Kelly] Talavou – who will be competing to make that squad next year, and I'm sure we'll bring somebody else in. I think the defensive line is one of the real strengths of our team, and we want to build on that."

Is there a specific moment or game where DT Haloti Ngata became the Pro Bowl player that he is? "You know, there might have been, but I can't think of it right now. I think Haloti had a great year last year, in my opinion, and maybe I'm a little bit biased toward our guys, but I thought Haloti was a Pro Bowl player last year. For him to be recognized this year as such is big. He got a couple sacks, but Haloti, again, he's going to be a guy that's going to work to get a lot better in the offseason. There are some things he can do better. I just talked to him yesterday. He can't wait to get started."

What are your thoughts on LB Ray Lewis' hit in the Indianapolis game, and do you think he'll get fined by the NFL? "I don't think the league will fine him. It was not a cheap shot. I had a chance to look at all those plays, obviously. That was a good, hard football tackle. Ray Lewis made a perfect form-tackle. The receiver caught the ball, was going to protect himself, and dropped his head to a certain level that was below his shoulder pad level after Ray had committed to the tackle. And at that point in time, you're committed to the tackle. You're not going to stop. You can't stop in mid-air; it's not humanly possible. So, when he went in to make that play, he was definitely in the strike zone and the player ducked and got hit in the head. That's how I saw it."

Will LB Dannell Ellerbe compete with LB Tavares Gooden and LB Brendon Ayanbadejo for a starting ILB position? "Yeah, well I think Dannell… He was the guy this year as a rookie, but obviously, he's got to get better to be that incumbent starter, I guess you'd call it. Tavares Gooden is a heck of a player. Brendon Ayanbadejo will be competing for that spot as you said. I think we've – Jameel McClain – we've got a nice group of young linebackers, and we've done it in kind of an unusual way. Tavares is the highest draft pick of the group. So, I think our personnel group has done a great job of bringing in linebackers. I can't wait to see how that shakes out. My guess is they'll all be playing, and [we'll be] rolling them in through packages because we're going to try to get those guys on the field."

What are you looking for from DE/OLB Paul Kruger going into next year? "Well, Paul is going to be more of a contributor. Paul Kruger… I think Paul Kruger, and we've said this all along, he's on his way to being a heck of a player. We have no disappointment in Paul Kruger whatsoever. Paul Kruger backed up Terrell Suggs this year. He played when Terrell was hurt, and played very well. I think it's hard to say that he's going to get as much playing time as you would like by the fact that he has a great player in front of him. He's got to do some things from a special teams perspective, maybe, to be a backup linebacker over some of the other guys. But that's not something he's ever played before. He was a pass-rushing guy in college, and that's not something those guys usually do. So, he'll learn that in the offseason. He can't wait to get started on that, and then we'll see – rush linebacker, defensive end, depending on much weight, strength and size he puts on – but he'll be in that mix for sure next year, and I'll expect him playing a lot."

What can OLB Terrell Suggs do to fully participate in the offseason? "Terrell's a hard worker. There is no one who likes to practice as much as Terrell Suggs. He loves to play games. He loves to lift weights. He trains hard, and that fact that he's going to have an opportunity, which he's never had… Since we've been here the last two years, he did not have an opportunity to be with us in the offseason program. He's told me he's going to be here for the full offseason program. I'm sure he will. He'll have commitments here and there, but I'm sure he'll be here, and we'll be working with him, as well as all the other guys, as hard as we can. But, he'll be out there in front. He'll be leading those guys. That's the way he trains, so I can't wait to have him around."

What's your role leading into the draft, and do you switch over to more of a scouting role? "Yeah, I'd guess you'd say it that way. Eric DeCosta gets mad at me because I'm always in there demanding more tape. 'I need more tape!' He's got it written on his board, 'I need more tape, Harbaugh.' (laughter) We're very involved. Our coaches… To me, it's fun. I think it's something that we want to be involved with. We've developed this rapport between the scouting department and the coaching department as far as the type of player we want, what we're looking for at each position, how we play defense, how we play offense, special teams, specifics at each position – the kind of player we want. I think our coaches and scouts do a great job of dialoguing on that. We watch all the tape together. All of our coaches, all of our scouts watch all the tape, and then we hash it out. Then, ultimately, when it comes down to making that call, Ozzie [Newsome] will make that call in the end, but there has not been one draft pick over the last two drafts that we basically disagreed on. There's not one guy that we've said, 'You know what, you want that guy? I don't want that guy, somebody else...' We have our opinions in there, but in the end, I think we're all able to say yes to a guy we should pick, and that comes from a lot of work and a lot of communication over the months leading up to the draft."

With a young offensive line, how important was C Matt Birk to the maturation of that line? And, the second part of that are the second-string quarterbacks. Are you pretty set that both Troy Smith and John Beck will be back, and can you talk about their preparation? "As far as the offensive line, I think that's a great observation. A young offensive line and an anchor like Matt Birk is what tied it all together, and that was really the whole idea. You know that from when we sat here and we signed him, Matt Birk tied the offensive line together. He did a great job, not just with the calls, which obviously he did a great job with and getting the line going in the right direction, I think he did a great job of showing those guys how to prepare. And then he played really well. There's nothing more we could ask of Matt Birk. I think he's been a home run. As far as the backup quarterback situation, we think we have two good, young backup quarterbacks – obviously, two guys that want to start in this league. So, I think we're very happy with our situation. We're very content to have those guys as a strong two and a strong three, and even battling it out within those roles as we go forward. By the same token, my guess is there's going to be some people that are going to be interested in those two guys, so we're not going to hold them back. But, we're going to make sure we do what's best for the Ravens."

A lot of guys were expressing disappointment in the locker room yesterday. Do you want them to keep that for a little bit or move past it as quickly as possible? "That's a good question. They're going to feel that way because our guys are competitive. Our guys expected to be playing this week, so that's a natural disappointment. But, I want them to understand how well they played this year. I want them to understand the accomplishments of the last two years. I want them to understand what we're building, and I want them to have a vision for where we're going, because if they don't have a vision for where we're going, we can't get there. But if they understand where we're going, they can build themselves into that. That's what I'm excited about. I think we'll move the emotions out pretty quick, and they'll get some time with their families, and they'll be back here going to work."

Back to the offensive line, you've got to be thrilled with the way T Michael Oher played in his rookie season. Do you see any circumstance where he might move to the left side next year? "I think Michael Oher could play either side, and Jared Gaither could play either side. That's the good news. That's exciting. I don't know how many teams in the league have that kind of a situation with their offensive line – to have two young tackles of that caliber. There's nobody else in the league that has that situation. I think right now, Jared Gaither at left and Michael Oher at right is working pretty well. But, that's going to depend on the ability of Jared to stay healthy and Michael to stay healthy and to be consistent. It's ability and it's durability. I want to have an offensive line where all five guys are in there every single game as much as possible. That's what you strive for, so that's what the offseason is all about. If we've got Jared Gaither on the left side and Michael Oher on the right side next year, I think we're going to be pretty pleased with that."

Do you find yourself rooting for Jets head coach Rex Ryan from here on out in the playoffs? "Yeah, of course. I'm biased, again. I mean, these guys are our guys. You look at Rex and Mike Pettine, Jimmy Leonhard, Marques Douglas, Bart Scott, those guys are our guys. We're proud of them, excited for them. Even a guy like Scott Cohen, who is the director of personnel over there with the Jets, [he] was a guy that I had the chance to work with for eight years in Philadelphia, and what a great job he's done. It's exciting to see those guys and what they've accomplished."

Have you talked to Rex at all? "No. He's pretty busy. (laughter) He's pretty busy right now."

Knowing that there aren't going to be many free agents available, other than the draft, do you think next season this team will look like the one that just played in Indianapolis? "I mean, if you're talking just foundationally and fundamentally, I sure hope so. I think what you want to do is always move forward, improve your team. We want to hold all the good players together as much as we can. We've got a lot of really good players. We're not willing to let anybody walk out the door, and certainly, we weren't last year, either. And sometimes that's beyond your control. You can't do anything about it. But the more guys we can keep here, then we can build on that and improve our team and get better, have as much competition in training camp as we can. I would say foundationally, fundamentally, culturally, yes. It should look the same, but better as we improve ourselves as coaches and improve our roster."

The other guy who people thought would make the Pro Bowl and didn't was LB Jarret Johnson. What are your impressions of him and how it seemed like he had a breakout year? "Jarret Johnson, I think he's playing… The two years I've seen him, I think he's played at that level for two straight years. Here's a guy that always plays well, always practices well, plays through any injury. And you guys see him out there – you can tell he's in pain lots of times, and he's flying around and there's not a better man in this league than Jarret Johnson, and he's a good football player. To see him get recognized the way he has been is encouraging, and I would think pretty soon he's going to be in the Pro Bowl. I think he had a Pro Bowl year this year, and I also think he had a Pro Bowl year last year."

RB Willis McGahee has talked about maybe wanting to go somewhere where he has an opportunity to get more touches. He's under contract, so where do you see him fitting in next year? "Willis is a Raven. He's under contract, and I had a chance to talk to him yesterday at length about it, and that's what he expressed to me. I don't think he's ever… No really good player is ever satisfied, ever, with their season. I know Willis wants to carry the ball as much as possible, and I was so excited for him. The way he ran the ball at the end of the year, I told him this, that was Willis McGahee. That was impressive. I think he'll have a great offseason, and he'll build on that going into next year. How it shakes out – Ray [Rice] and Willis and Le'Ron [McClain], and then two young guys, Matt Lawrence and Jalen Parmele – they're all going to be in our mix. You can't have enough good players at any position, and we'll put them out there and give them the ball, and they're going to help us win games."

In an uncapped season, a lot of fans will think that means spend as much money as you have to get the player you want to get. What is the organizational philosophy about that moving forward? "I don't want to speak for Steve Bisciotti or Dick Cass philosophically, but I think that we, Ozzie [Newsome] and myself, respect the budget and respect… It's not a salary cap, but there's a certain spending framework that we want to stay within. That's out of respect for the organization. And really, you're not going to be able to just spend gobs of money and improve your football team all that much, because the free agents just aren't going to be available. It would just be foolish. I think what we'll do is do what we have to do to keep our players in place as much as we can, and then build our team as well as we can with respect for the budget, and that's something that I know Ozzie's committed to, and I am, too."

Are you going to take a little vacation from football and then come back to prepare for the draft, or are you just going to push straight though? "I'd like to go take… Where do you go? I'd be somewhere thinking about football, right? (laughter) You'd be sitting down there thinking about your team. I can't wait to spend a little more time with Alison and Ingrid. Alison's got a basketball game tonight at 6:30. I plan to be there on time for that. I can't wait. That's what we'll do. We'll be doing family stuff."

Pryce and McGahee have higher price tags for next year. Do you envision keeping both of them this next season? "I can't read the future, so I don't know how that's going to shake out. I think those are conversations we're going to have over the next months, and specifically, next week when we have our personnel meetings. But, from a football coach's standpoint, I know one thing: They make our team better, and that's a pretty good place to be with those two guys on your team."

RB Ray Rice's stiff arm the other night – was that him being a quick study of McGahee from a couple of weeks ago at Oakland, and what does that say about Rice? "Wow. I think maybe he did learn a little bit from Willis on that, but I think Ray's always had a pretty good stiff arm, I would guess. I haven't really, to be honest with you, I guess I haven't studied Ray's stiff arm attributes quite as closely over the last couple of years, but I've seen it. I've seen him do it in practice, so it's in his repertoire."

There was a report last week that Flacco was in so much pain on the way back from Oakland that he couldn't sit down. Can you confirm that or elaborate on that at all? "I don't know. It was a six-hour flight, and I saw him sitting down, so I think he was able to sit down. Joe fought through some… He had a bad contusion on his thigh, on the outside of his thigh and hip area there, and it swelled up legitimately so. I think it was restrictive for him. If any of you guys have had that kind of a serious bruise, you know how much that hurts. There's a former player right back here shaking his head. Right? You know how much that hurts. You get on a flight, and that's when swelling starts to happen a little bit more. I think Joe showed some real toughness throughout the last five, six weeks playing through that."

What do you want people to remember about this year's season? "I haven't really thought about that to put it into words. I think people see what they see, and I think if you're looking closely you see a bunch of quality, high-character guys fighting every week to be as good as they can be and competing, playing from the first whistle until the last whistle, as hard and as well as they possibly can to try to win a football game. I'm pretty proud of them. I think we won some games by tight margins. We won some games by large margins, and we lost some games by tight margins. We never went out there and didn't equip ourselves well. There are some things we'd want to do better, but I'm proud of our guys, and I would hope our fans are, too."

When Reed mentioned the other night that he might consider retiring, is that something that was news to you or something that had been discussed in the course of the season? "I'm not sure about Ed's private conversations, but I hadn't had any conversations with him about that. We talked about it yesterday. I think I understand where he's coming from. I think he wants a little time just to try to get healthy and look at some things to come back. That was my encouragement. Whatever he can do to put that stuff behind him as much as he can, he'll try to do. I'm real hopeful, and I believe he's going to come back and play, and I'm going to go on that assumption until he tells us differently."

GAME 1 • RAVENS 38, CHIEFS 24

Kansas City (0-1) Baltimore (1-0)

Sunday, September 13, 2009 • 1:02 PM ET • M&T Bank Stadium • Baltimore

Weather: 76º, Sunny, Wind N 5 mph • Attendance 71,099 • Time 3:18

The Ravens' offense set a team record with 501 yards of offense – while Baltimore's defense allowed just 188 – in the season-opening 38-24 victory over the visiting Chiefs. The Ravens took a 10-0 1st-quarter lead after a K Steve Hauschka 44-yard FG and a QB Joe Flacco-to-RB Willis McGahee 3-yard TD toss. But, Kansas City blocked a P Sam Koch punt and recovered it in the end zone to cut the Ravens' lead to 10-7 in the 2nd. Baltimore was driving in the 3rd as Flacco went no-huddle, but was thwarted by LB Derrick Johnson's 70-yard INT. KC then scored on a 2-yard TD pass to WR Dwayne Bowe giving the Chiefs a 14-10, 3rd-quarter advantage. After falling behind again, KC came back to tie the game at 24 with 5:21 left in the game. Flacco threw for a career-best 307 yards (26 of 43 attempts) and 3 TDs, which was another high mark for the 2nd-year signal caller. RB Ray Rice added 108 rushing yards (19 carries), while TE Todd Heap and WR Mark Clayton each caught 5 passes, including a TD apiece. Clayton's 31-yard TD reception from Flacco at 2:06 in the 4th quarter was the game-winner. The Ravens added another TD (McGahee's 2nd on the day) with :31 remaining to seal the victory. WR Derrick Mason and McGahee, who scored the 2 TDs, each grabbed 4 receptions in the win.

GAME 2 • RAVENS 31, CHARGERS 26

Baltimore (2-0) San Diego (1-1)

Sunday, September 20, 2009 • 1:15 PM PT • Qualcomm Stadium • San Diego

Weather: 83º, Sunny, Wind W 8 mph • Attendance 66,882 • Time 3:14

The Ravens' 1st road trip of the season proved to be a successful one as they won, 31-26, at San Diego. RB Willis McGahee, who rushed for 79 yards, totaled 2 TDs, while QB Joe Flacco threw a pair of TD passes, one to WR Kelley Washington (27 yards) and the other to TE Todd Heap (9 yards). Baltimore was 3-of-4 for TDs in the red zone (also earning 1 FG), while the Chargers were 0-for-5, including K Nate Kaeding field goals of 29, 22, 23 and 25 yards. After K Steve Hauschka's clutch 33-yard FG gave the Ravens a 31-26 lead with 2:54 left in the game, the Chargers drove to Baltimore's 15-yard line. There, with 37 seconds remaining and facing a 4th-and-2 situation, San Diego gave the ball to RB Darren Sproles, who was tackled for a 5-yard loss by ILB Ray Lewis. Lewis called the tackle "one of the greatest plays of my career." Helping the Ravens' defense were interceptions by S Dawan Landry and OLB Antwan Barnes. Flacco completed 17 of 26 passes for 190 yards, while San Diego QB Philip Rivers was spectacular at times, hitting 25 of 45 passes for 436 yards, including 7 to Sproles for 124 yards. Sproles also added 128 yards on 4 kickoff returns. The Ravens produced 130 yards rushing on 32 attempts and P Sam Koch placed 3 punts inside the 10-yard line.

GAME 3 • RAVENS 34, BROWNS 3

Baltimore (3-0) Cleveland (0-3)

Sunday, September 27, 2009 • 1:02 PM ET • M&T Bank Stadium • Baltimore

Weather: 72°, Partly Sunny, Wind WSW 6 mph • Attendance 70,950 • Time 2:46

The Ravens followed 3 INTs with TD drives in a 34-3 stomping of the Browns at M&T Bank Stadium. Baltimore CB Domonique Foxworth ended Cleveland's 1st series with an INT to the Browns' 31. The Ravens quickly took advantage, taking a 7-0 lead on a 7-yard RB Willis McGahee TD run. McGahee came back with a 15-yard 2nd-quarter TD. Those scores, plus 2 K Steve Hauschka FGs, gave the Ravens a 20-0 halftime lead. Browns head coach Eric Mangini replaced QB Brady Quinn with Derek Anderson for the start of the 2nd half. Baltimore's defense then stole 3 Anderson passes in the final 2 quarters, 2 of which led to Ravens TDs. The initial score came on RB Ray Rice's 1st NFL TD (9-yard run), and the 2nd saw WR Derrick Mason catch a 72-yard Joe Flacco TD pass. Mason earlier caught the 800th pass of his 15-year NFL career, and Flacco's 342 passing yards were a career high. Baltimore produced 479 yards (tied for 2nd most in team history), while the defense held the Browns to 186 net yards and pitched a shutout into the 4th quarter. Baltimore extended its streak of not allowing a 100-yard rusher to an NFL-high 38 games, and the Ravens improved their record to 47-0 (since 2000) when they have a turnover margin of +2 or better.

GAME 4 • PATRIOTS 27, RAVENS 21

Baltimore (3-1) New England (3-1)

Sunday, October 4, 2009 • 1:02 PM ET • Gillette Stadium • Foxborough

Weather: 64°, Cloudy, Wind NW 2 mph • Attendance 68,756 • Time 3:26

An impressive final drive in the 4th quarter fell short when the Ravens dropped a 27-21 decision at the Patriots. Baltimore drove to the Pats' 14 and faced a 4th-and-4 before QB Joe Flacco's pass to WR Mark Clayton fell incomplete. The Ravens took a 7-3, 1st-quarter lead on a Flacco-to-WR Derrick Mason 20-yard TD pass. After the Patriots took a 17-7 halftime lead, OLB Terrell Suggs sacked QB Tom Brady, causing a fumble that DE Dwan Edwards recovered in the end zone to bring the Ravens within 3 points (17-14). The 14-yard sack for Suggs made him the franchise's all-time leader in sack yardage (437) passing Peter Boulware (428). A Brady-to-WR Randy Moss 14-yard TD gave NE a 24-14 advantage. Flacco then found RB Willis McGahee on a 13-yard TD to make it 24-21 in the 4th quarter. The TD was McGahee's 7th on the season, which gave him a league-high 42 points. A Stephen Gostkowski 33-yard FG provided the final margin. In the loss, RB Ray Rice collected his 3rd-career 100-yard game (103 yards), and the Ravens' defense extended its streak of not allowing a 100-yard rusher to an NFL-high 39 games.

GAME 5 • BENGALS 17, RAVENS 14

Baltimore (3-2) Cincinnati (4-1)

Sunday, October 11, 2009 • 1:02 PM EDT • M&T Bank Stadium • Baltimore

Weather: 64°, Clear, Sunny, Wind WNW 3 mph • Attendance 71,161 • Time 2:58

A 20-yard QB Carson Palmer-to-WR Andre Caldwell TD pass with 22 seconds left in the game gave the visiting Bengals a 17-14 victory over the Ravens. That score trumped Baltimore's go-ahead, 4th-quarter 48-yard TD pass from QB Joe Flacco to RB Ray Rice that gave the Ravens a 14-10 lead. The score was Rice's 1st-career receiving TD. NT Kelly Gregg blocked a Shayne Graham FGA to halt the Bengals' 1st drive. After a scoreless 1st quarter, S Ed Reed gave the Ravens a 7-0 lead when he intercepted Palmer and raced 52 yards for a TD. The INT-TD was Reed's 12th-career return TD (13th including postseason), and it was his 6th INT-TD (a franchise record) of his 8-year career (7th including postseason). A 32-yard Graham FG made the score 7-3 at the half. Cincy RB Cedric Benson's 28-yard TD sprint in the 3rd quarter gave the Bengals a 10-7 advantage. Benson became the 1st back to rush for 100 yards (27 carries for 120 yards) against Baltimore in 40 games. Rice rushed for 69 yards and added 74 more on 7 catches, giving him 143 all-purpose yards. The Bengals outgained the Ravens 403 to 257 yards.

GAME 6 • VIKINGS 33, RAVENS 31

Baltimore (3-3) Minnesota (6-0)

Sun., Oct. 18, 2009 • 12:05 PM CDT • Mall of America Field at HHH Metrodome • Minneapolis

Weather: Indoors • Attendance 63,689 • Time 3:15

Despite a heroic 4th-quarter comeback that featured 21 points by Baltimore, the Ravens lost, 33-31, at then-undefeated Minnesota. K Steve Hauschka's 44-yard field goal attempt that ended the game sailed wide left, dashing the Ravens' opportunity for victory. The Vikings took a 14-0 lead in the game's 1st 9 minutes on QB Brett Favre's 2 TD tosses. A 29-yard Hauschka FG made the margin 14-3 at the half. Two K Ryan Longwell FGs and a 3rd Favre TD throw gave the Vikings a 27-10 margin with 10 minutes left in the contest. Then Ravens QB Joe Flacco threw TD passes to WRs Mark Clayton (32 yards) and Derrick Mason (12 yards) on back-to-back Baltimore possessions, bringing the Ravens within 6 at 30-24. After the Ravens' defense produced a 3-and-out, Baltimore's offense came right back with a 33-yard RB Ray Rice TD run, giving the Ravens a 31-30 lead with 3:37 left in the game. Favre then directed a Vikings' drive that ended with a Longwell 31-yard FG at the 1:56 mark. Flacco drove Baltimore to the Vikings' 26, where Hauschka's miss came. Flacco finished the game with 28 completions on 43 attempts for 385 yards (2nd most in team history). Rice, who scored 2 TDs, caught 10 passes for 117 yards and added 77 yards on the ground.

The defense held the previously undefeated Broncos to 200 yards and 1 TD, while QB Joe Flacco completed 80 percent of his passes, and the special teams scored a TD in the Ravens' 30-7 victory. Baltimore took a 6-0 halftime lead on 2 K Steve Hauschka FGs (43 and 35 yards). Rookie CB/RS Lardarius Webb opened the 2nd half with a 95-yard KOR for a TD, giving the Ravens a 13-0 advantage. RB Knowshon Moreno's 1-yard TD brought the Broncos within 6 at 13-7 in the 3rd quarter, but the Ravens scored the game's remaining points on another Hauschka FG (31 yards) and 2 4th-quarter TDs (WR Derrick Mason on a 20-yard pass from Flacco and RB Ray Rice's 7-yard run). Flacco, who ended the game with 14 straight completions, was 20-of-25 for 175 yards. Flacco's 80 percent completion percentage, which tied a franchise record, was the first since Elvis Grbac completed 80 percent at Cleveland on 10/21/01. Rice caught 5 passes for 24 yards and rushed for 84 more. It was the 4th-consecutive game that Rice produced over 100 yards from scrimmage. TE Todd Heap also caught the 400th reception of his 9-year career in the 1st quarter.

GAME 8 • BENGALS 17, RAVENS 7

Sunday, November 8, 2009 • 1:02 PM EST • Paul Brown Stadium • Cincinnati

Weather: 67º, Sunny, Wind S 7 mph • Attendance 64,313 • Time 3:10

The Bengals scored on each of their opening 3 possessions to take a 17-0, 2nd-quarter lead and held on for a 17-7 victory at Paul Brown Stadium. Cincinnati opened the game with 12- and 10-play TD drives, taking a 7-0 lead on a QB Carson Palmer-to-WR Andre Caldwell 6-yard TD pass, and a 14-0 advantage on RB Cedric Benson's 1-yard plunge. K Shayne Graham's 23-yard, 2nd-quarter FG gave the Bengals a 17-0 halftime lead. RB Ray Rice's 2-yard TD run brought the Ravens within 10 at 17-7 early in the 4th quarter. After S Ed Reed forced and recovered a WR Chad Ochocinco fumble, K Steve Hauschka missed a 38-yard FG attempt (wide left) with 6:17 left, which slowed a late Baltimore rally. The Ravens managed just 215 yards and converted just 1 of 10 3rd downs. Benson became the 1st back to run for over 100 yards twice (120 and 117 yards) in the same season against Baltimore since Pittsburgh's Jerome Bettis (116 and 105) did the same in 1996. Palmer improved to 8-3 against the Ravens in his career, while the Bengals swept the Ravens for the 3rd time in 5 years (2005, 2007).

Monday, Nov. 16, 2009 • 8:40 PM EST • Cleveland Browns Stadium • Cleveland

Weather: 46°, Dry Cold, Wind NE 16 mph • Attendance 69,023 • Time 2:59

The Ravens recorded their 1st shutout in 3 seasons when they stopped the host Browns, 16-0, on Monday Night Football at Cleveland Browns Stadium. The AFC North rivals played to a 0-0 halftime deadlock before Baltimore exploded for 13 points in the opening 3 minutes of the 3rd quarter. The Ravens' 1st score came on a 13-yard RB Ray Rice touchdown, which was set up by a 41-yard Joe Flacco-to-WR Derrick Mason completion. On the next play from scrimmage, SS Dawan Landry intercepted a QB Brady Quinn pass and raced 48 yards for a TD. It was Landry's team-leading 3rd INT on the season. K Steve Hauschka, who added a 44-yard field goal later in the quarter, had his extra point attempt blocked by DT Shaun Rogers. (Hauschka missed a 36-yard FG attempt in the 1st quarter.) The Ravens limited Cleveland to just 160 yards, holding Quinn to 13 completions in 31 attempts for 99 yards, while sacking him 4 times. Rice rushed 20 times for 89 yards, while Flacco completed 13 of 18 for 155. Rice added 15 receiving yards giving him 104 yards from scrimmage, his 6th-straight game of 100-plus scrimmage yards. Baltimore's last shutout was a 27-0 victory vs. Pittsburgh on 11/26/06.

GAME 10 • COLTS 17, RAVENS 15

Indianapolis (10-0) Baltimore (5-5)

Sunday, November 22, 2009 • 1:02 PM EST • M&T Bank Stadium • Baltimore

Weather: 56°, Sunny, Wind NE 7 mph • Attendance 71,320 • Time 3:04

Former Ravens K Matt Stover kicked the winning FG (25 yards) with 7:02 left in the game in the Colts' 17-15 victory over Baltimore. Ravens K Billy Cundiff scored all of Baltimore's points with 5 FGs, which tied Stover's single-game team record. (Cundiff did miss a 30-yard attempt in the 3rd quarter.) The Colts took a 7-0 lead on the game's opening drive, which ended with a 3-yard QB Peyton Manning-to-TE Dallas Clark TD (Clark's only catch of the day). The Ravens grabbed a 9-7, 2nd-quarter lead before RB Joseph Addai's 5-yard TD run gave Indianapolis a 14-9 halftime lead. Baltimore had a 1st down on the Colts' 1-yard line in the 4th quarter, but could not punch the ball into the end zone on 3 runs. Cundiff then kicked his 5th FG to give the Ravens a 15-14 lead. QB Joe Flacco's INT at the Colts' 13 with 2:49 remaining in the contest stopped the Ravens' comeback. Flacco completed 23 of 35 for 256 yards, including 9 for 142 to WR Derrick Mason and 7 to RB Ray Rice for 64 more. The 142 receiving yards for Mason are the 3rd most of his 13-year NFL career. Rice's 135 yards from scrimmage gave him 8 games with 100 or more yards from scrimmage, tying him (Steven Jackson) for the league lead. Also, the Ravens' offensive line did not allow a sack for the first time in 2009.

GAME 13 • RAVENS 48, LIONS 3

Detroit (2-11) Baltimore (7-6)

Sunday, December 13, 2009 • 1:02 PM EST • M&T Bank Stadium • Baltimore

Weather: 36º, Rain, Wind NE 3 mph • Attendance 70,673 • Time 3:13

It was a record-setting day for the Ravens when they beat the Lions, 48-3, in a cold rain. Baltimore established a team record with 548 yards of total offense (308 rushing - 2nd best in Ravens history - and 240 passing). QB Joe Flacco, who threw a 62-yard touchdown pass to WR Derrick Mason, produced a career-high QB rating (120.8). RB Ray Rice, who combined for 219 yards, rushed for a career-best 166 yards (13 carries for a team-record 12.8-yard average). And, the defense wasn't too shabby either, limiting Detroit to 229 yards and no TDs. The Ravens took a 20-3 halftime lead on Mason's TD, a Rice 59-yard TD run and 2 K Billy Cundiff FGs. (The Ravens tallied 315 total yards in the 1st half – a team record.) Baltimore then exploded for 21 unanswered points in the 3rd quarter: a 3-yard FB Le'Ron McClain score and 2 RB Willis McGahee TD sprints (8 and 19 yards). Backup QB Troy Smith finished the scoring with a 15-yard TD run in the 4th quarter. Rice totaled 204 of his 219 scrimmage yards in the 1st half, but then left the game with a chest injury and did not return. The 48 points tied a team record (the Ravens defeated Green Bay in Baltimore by the same score, 48-3, on 12/19/05). The victory was the Ravens' 12th of 13 vs. the NFC at home.

GAME 14 • RAVENS 31, BEARS 7

Chicago (5-9) Baltimore (8-6)

Sunday, December 20, 2009 • 4:15 PM EST • M&T Bank Stadium • Baltimore

Weather: 32º, Clear, Wind WNW 19 mph • Attendance 71,011 • Time 2:52

The Ravens took the ball away 6 times (tying a team record) from the Bears in the 31-7 victory at M&T Bank Stadium. Baltimore scored 24 points after the Chicago turnovers, which included a career-high 2 INTs by Ravens CB Domonique Foxworth. The Ravens took a 14-0 1st-quarter lead on 2 Joe Flacco TD passes (14 and 7 yards) to TE Todd Heap. The Bears' lone score came on WR Earl Bennett's 49-yard punt return in the 2nd quarter. Flacco threw 2 more TD passes in the 3rd quarter, the 1st to WR Demetrius Williams for 32 yards and the 2nd to WR Derrick Mason for 18 yards. (Flacco's 4 TD passes set a career high.) Mason recorded the 850th catch of his career on his 1st reception of the game, becoming the 16th player in NFL history to accomplish the feat. K Billy Cundiff's 40-yard FG finished the scoring. Flacco, who completed 21 of 29 for 234 yards, produced his best-ever QB rating (135.6). The 135.6 rating was the 2nd-best mark in Ravens history (Kyle Boller's 136.8 vs. GB on 12/19/05 is No. 1). On the other side of the ball, Baltimore's defense held Chicago QB Jay Cutler to a team-record-low 7.9 QB rating. The victory gave the Ravens a 13-1 record vs. the NFC at home since 2003.

GAME 15 • STEELERS 23, RAVENS 20

Baltimore (8-7) Pittsburgh (8-7)

Sunday, December 27, 2009 • 1:02 PM EST • Heinz Field • Pittsburgh

Weather: Mostly Cloudy, 39°, Wind SW 9 mph • Attendance 64,068 • Time 3:07

With 2 Ravens touchdowns nullified because of penalties and a 3rd potential TD dropped in the end zone, Baltimore lost a gut-wrenching 23-20 decision at Heinz Field in Pittsburgh. The Ravens rallied from a 20-10 halftime deficit to tie the game at 20 after 3 quarters. Steelers K Jeff Reed's 38-yard field goal with 3:38 left in the contest provided the winning margin. With Pittsburgh leading 20-17, CB Domonique Foxworth stole a QB Ben Roethlisberger pass and raced 46 yards for what would have been the go-ahead score. An illegal block penalty (LB Terrell Suggs) on the return put the ball at the Steelers' 37. Six plays later, K Billy Cundiff's 35-yard FG tied the game. On the Ravens' next possession, RB Willis McGahee ran for a 32-yard TD that was eliminated by a holding call (WR Kelley Washington). Two plays after that, WR Derrick Mason dropped a QB Joe Flacco pass in the end zone. TE Todd Heap scored both of the Ravens' TDs (30 and 7 yards) on throws from Flacco. RB Ray Rice rushed for 141 yards against the NFL's then-No. 1 rush defense, becoming the 1st back to gain over 100 yards on the Steelers' "D" in 33 games. Mason also reached the 11,000-yard receiving mark for his career, pulling in 7 catches for 77 yards on the day.

Weather: 54°, Sunny, Wind WNW 6 mph • Attendance 38,400 • Time 2:53

RB Willis McGahee scored all 3 of the Ravens' touchdowns in Baltimore's 21-13 playoff-clinching victory at Oakland in the regular season finale. McGahee, who shared time with RB Ray Rice (70 yards), ran 16 times for a career-high 167 yards (10.4 avg.). McGahee's 1st TD (2-yard rush) gave the Ravens a 7-0 lead. His 2nd score, a spectacular 77-yard run that included a devastating downfield stiff arm, gave the Ravens a 14-3 lead. The 77-yard run tied himself (12/20/08 at Dal.) for the 2nd-longest TD run in Ravens history. The Raiders made the score 14-10 at the half after QB Charlie Frye hit TE Zach Miller with a 12-yard TD throw. K Sebastian Janikowski's 39-yard field goal brought Oakland within 1 (14-13) after 3 quarters. McGahee's last TD (another 2-yard rush in the 4th quarter) provided the final margin. Rookie ILB Dannell Ellerbe set up McGahee's score with an interception off Raiders' QB JaMarcus Russell, who had entered the game after Frye left the game injured (back/ankle). Ellerbe also recovered a Russell fumble in the 4th quarter. Baltimore out-rushed the Raiders 240 yards to 51. QB Joe Flacco completed 11 of 19 passes for 102 yards, including 4 to Rice, with no INTs.

WILD CARD • RAVENS 33, PATRIOTS 14

Baltimore (10-7) New England (10-7)

Sunday, January 10, 2010 • 1:03 PM EST • Gillette Stadium • Foxborough, Ma.

Weather: 20°, Sunny/Cold, Wind NNW 12 mph • Attendance 68,756 • Time 3:06

RB Ray Rice ran 83 yards for a touchdown on the 1st play from scrimmage, and the Ravens never looked back in the 33-14 Wild Card victory at New England. And that wasn't all that Baltimore did in the 1st quarter of its one-sided thumping of the Patriots. Three QB Tom Brady turnovers helped the Ravens push to a 24-0, 1st-period lead. Brady's 1st miscue came when OLB Terrell Suggs stripped the Pats' QB of the ball and recovered the fumble, which led to a FB Le'Ron McClain 1-yard TD. CB Chris Carr then intercepted Brady, setting up Rice's 2nd TD (1-yard rush). S Ed Reed intercepted another Brady pass that was followed by a 27-yard Billy Cundiff field goal. A misplayed punt in the 2nd quarter gave the Patriots the start of their lone 1st-half TD (Brady to WR Julian Edelman, 6 yards). Another Brady INT set up a 3rd-quarter Cundiff FG (23 yards). A 2nd Brady-to-Edelman TD (1 yard) made the score 27-14 after 3 quarters. RB Willis McGahee finished the scoring with a 3-yard TD in the final period. The Ravens rushed 52 times for 234 yards, including 159 (22 carries) by Rice. QB Joe Flacco threw just 10 passes, completing 4. Brady, who was sacked 3 times, was 23-of-42 for 154 yards with a lost fumble and 3 INTs. The Ravens' victory over New England was the Pats' 1st postseason loss at home since 1978, snaping a streak of 11 consecutive playoff wins at home.

DIVISIONAL PLAYOFF • COLTS 20, RAVENS 3

Baltimore (10-8) Indianapolis (15-2)

Saturday, January 16, 2010 • 8:15 PM EST • Lucas Oil Stadium • Indianapolis

Weather: Indoors • Attendance 67,535 • Time 2:57

The Ravens' playoff run came to a halt at Lucas Oil Stadium in Indianapolis with a 20-3 defeat to the Colts. Baltimore turned the ball over 4 times, including 2 INTs by Joe Flacco and 2 costly fumbles. The game was tied at 3 until late in the 2nd quarter, but future Hall of Fame QB Peyton Manning drove the Colts and scored on a 10-yard TD pass to rookie WR Austin Collie just before the 2-minute warning. The Ravens went 3-and-out in the next series, which gave Manning enough time to maneuver 64 yards on 8 plays for another 7 points. That score came on a 2nd TD toss, this time to WR Reggie Wayne (3 yards) with 3 seconds remaining, giving the Colts a 17-3 halftime lead. After the Colts opened the game on an opening-drive FG by former Ravens K Matt Stover (44 yards), current Ravens K Billy Cundiff connected on his only FGA (25 yards) on Baltimore's 1st possession of the game, tying the contest at 3. Neither team could score on their next few drives, until the Manning-to-Collie TD near the end of the 2nd quarter. In the 2nd half, the Ravens were unable to move the ball well against a formidable Colts' defense. A 4th-quarter RB Ray Rice fumble and 2 Flacco INTs in Baltimore's final 2 possessions sealed the Ravens' fate. The Ravens' 5th-ranked rush defense held the Colts to 42 rushing yards in the loss. S Ed Reed recorded his 7th INT in 7 career postseason games when he picked off Manning in the 3rd quarter.

– SEASON REVIEW CLIPS –

Adding Oher and Birk to offensive line could be start of something really good

By Mike Preston
The Baltimore Sun
September 8, 2009

As soon as the 2008 season ended, Ravens general manager Ozzie Newsome had two major goals for building the Ravens. He wanted a right offensive tackle and improved play and depth in the secondary, particularly at cornerback.

The verdict is out on both, but the Ravens might have acquired the final piece of what could become one of the most dominant offensive lines in the NFL. Once the Ravens knew they had a quarterback in Joe Flacco last season, the rest was obvious. They selected Mississippi offensive tackle Michael Oher with their No. 1 pick in April to help Flacco stay upright.

Despite shuffling offensive linemen in training camp and through preseason games because of various injuries, the starting group has remained impressive.

"You have the quarterback, so you have to make sure you can protect him," general manager Ozzie Newsome said. "That's why we went after [Orlando] Pace and did some other things, and then we eventually got Michael Oher.

"I like our athleticism, and another thing I like is our toughness, and how physical they have become," Newsome said. "They take pride in dominating an opponent. I don't know what their limit is with the offense, but they can become really good. We're just scratching the surface, and having [center Matt] Birk in the middle has made them even better."

Building a team through the offensive line is a smart move. The Ravens got away from that philosophy soon after the team moved from Cleveland to Baltimore for the 1996 season. And instead of finding athletic linemen who could run, the Ravens always seemed to sign players who basically could only block straight ahead.

But that's not the case anymore. The Ravens can block with power, and they are agile enough to pull around the corner, trap-block or get downfield on a screen. Birk, a center signed by the Ravens during the offseason, is the elder statesman at 33.

The next oldest is guard-center Chris Chester at 26. The rest are still babies.

And that's what has the Ravens so excited. With Flacco starting just his second year, the production should only increase. Maybe the Ravens don't have the big-name wide receiver, but a lot of teams don't have an offensive line as young and as talented as the Ravens do.

The left side is more technical than the right with tackle Jared Gaither and guard Ben Grubbs, both in their third seasons. Gaither has the perfect body for a left tackle, and Grubbs is the protoypical guard.

"Ben definitely plays at a high level, and that's no accident," Birk said. "He epitomizes what you want in an offensive lineman. He has a lot of pride. He has toughness. He has everything. His physical talent sets him apart. He's athletic. He's got all the tools. He pushes himself. He does everything well."

The right side is all about demeanor. Chester is holding down the guard spot for third-year player Marshal Yanda, but when Yanda and Oher are in the lineup, you have two nasty, mean guys. Because most teams are right-handed in the NFL, you want these types of players on that side because that's where you usually run the ball.

And then there's Birk. He has more Pro Bowl appearances than most of these guys have years in the league. Birk is the consummate professional. He just works and works and works ...

"The Pro Bowl is the ultimate measurement for an offensive lineman," Grubbs said. "I just hope that when I'm finished, I can have half as many as Matt Birk."

The Ravens also have versatility. Yanda can play guard or tackle, and Chester can play center or guard. Oher can play at either tackle. What this group doesn't have is depth. The team doesn't have a legitimate No. 3 tackle, and tackles have missed significant playing time the past three seasons because of injuries.

The Ravens signed guard-tackle Tony Moll from the Green Bay Packers last week. He isn't in the class with the starters, but the Ravens are hoping he is at least serviceable. Hopefully, they won't have to use him.

Because if this starting group stays healthy, the Ravens should be competitive for many years to come.

Ravens defense appreciates production from offense

By David Ginsburg
The Associated Press
September 15, 2009

OWINGS MILLS, Md. (AP) - Ray Lewis has waited more than a decade for the Baltimore Ravens' offense to lend ample support to a defense that has long provided the team with its identity.

This could be the year.

Baltimore compiled a franchise-record 501 yards Sunday in a season-opening 38-24 win over the Kansas City Chiefs. Second-year quarterback Joe Flacco set career highs in completions (26), attempts (43), yards passing (307) and touchdown throws (three).

"It was a lot of fun," tight end Todd Heap, who had five catches, said Monday. "I think most of all, the fans appreciated it and enjoyed it." The defense loved it, too.

"We have a heck of an offensive line right now, a quarterback who's really growing up, and a three-headed monster at running back. Anytime you've got that, you have a chance to really control the ball," said Lewis, who had six tackles from his middle linebacker spot.

Baltimore ran 90 plays and held the ball for nearly 40 minutes.

"Our defense likes it when they can put together solid drives and we can get a rest," safety Ed Reed said.

"The defense appreciated the offense moving the ball and scoring points and keeping them off the field," coach John Harbaugh said, "and the offense appreciated all the three-and-outs. You get 90 plays on offense and you go 47 plays on defense, that's what you're looking for."

With Lewis leading the way, the defense was exceptional for three quarters before tailing off. It didn't matter, though, because the offense produced three touchdowns in the final 8:10 to help the Ravens pull away.

"Scoring 21 points in the fourth quarter said it all," Heap said.

The statistics from one game doesn't necessarily mean Baltimore has reversed its reputation as a defensive team. But it shows that the offense has the potential to make a name for itself, too.

"That definitely the goal," Heap said. "We want to put our offense on the map. Coming into this year we set a lot of goals offensively, and we're doing everything we can to reach those goals. I think there were quite a few of them we were able to attain; now it's a matter of going out and doing it week in and week out."

One of the most impressive aspects of the offensive onslaught was that so many people contributed, beginning with an offensive line containing newcomer Matt Birk and center and rookie Michael Oher at right tackle. Five different players carried the football, led by Ray Rice (108 yards) and Willis McGahee (44 yards and a TD).

Heap and Mark Clayton each had five catches, Derrick Mason and McGahee had four apiece and Kelly Washington had three receptions for 43 yards. Even fullback Le'Ron McClain had three catches for 23 yards.

"Probably the most fun was spreading the ball around, seeing how many guys could touch the football," Heap said. "That way, the defense can't key on anyone. They can't sit back there and say, 'They're going to one of two guys.'

"Sometimes it's been like that around here," Heap acknowledged. "But it's not like that anymore."

Instinctive Lewis short circuits Chargers' rally

By Michael Silver

Sometimes, one play is all it takes to reveal everything essential about a team, its best player and his legacy. Sometimes, in the ultimate team sport, it can be done by one.

On a gorgeous mid-September Sunday, two AFC contenders waged a spirited battle for three hours and 14 minutes, and all that mattered was one man's two-second burst of brilliance that some witnesses will be talking about for decades.

The setup was delicious: The San Diego Chargers trailed the Baltimore Ravens by five points with 37 seconds remaining at Qualcomm Stadium, and quarterback Philip Rivers(notes), who had thrown for a career-best 436 yards, brought his team up to the line of scrimmage. It was fourth-and-2 from the Ravens' 15-yard line, and Baltimore middle linebacker Ray Lewis(notes) could scarcely contain his excitement.

Rivers took the snap and prepared to hand the ball to the shortest and quickest man on the field: 5-foot-6 scatback Darren Sproles(notes). Lewis, the greatest defensive player of his generation, knew exactly what had to be done.

"I'm thinking, 'Snap the ball. Snap the ball,' " the future Hall of Famer said. "There's a backside A-gap, and I promise I'm gonna shoot it. He was sitting out there, and I'm like, I'm gonna kill this dude."

Metaphorically, in one determined act of audacity, Lewis extinguished Sproles, the Chargers and the notion that, at 34, he's no longer at the peak of his powers. Though Lewis may have generated less heat than expected on the free-agent market before re-signing with the Ravens in March, he proved Sunday he's still their most valuable player, end of conversation.

"Did you like that?" Pro Bowl pass rusher Terrell Suggs(notes) asked in the aftermath of the Ravens' 31-26 victory. "That's why he's the greatest ever. Let's face it: He is the Baltimore Ravens."

To the 66,882 fans at Qualcomm, Lewis was the human buzzkill. Perfectly timing his rush by taking off a second before the ball was snapped, Lewis shot the A-gap – between center Scott Mruczkowski(notes) and right guard Brandyn Dombrowski(notes) – and did something that made his teammates want to party like John Blutarsky.

As Rivers turned right to hand the ball to Sproles, the quarterback had the sick sensation that something bad was about to happen. It was: Lewis arrived a split second after Sproles got the ball, smashing his helmet into the runner's chest and taking him down five yards behind the line of scrimmage.

"One of the coolest things I've ever seen," said Baltimore center Matt Birk(notes), a 12th-year veteran. "Unbelievable."

Just like that, the Ravens were 2-0, the Chargers were 1-1 and a 10-time Pro Bowler was proclaiming that he'd made one of the greatest plays of his career. The man wasn't lying, either. It was a moment that revealed the entire Lewis package: preparation, intelligence, passion, bravado and ferocious intimidation.

It began, as so much does with Lewis, in the film room: He'd watched enough last week on the Chargers, especially their opening-week victory over the Oakland Raiders, to know what to expect. In that Monday night triumph in Oakland, Sproles had squirted in from five yards out with 18 seconds left to score the winning points, and Lewis was convinced San Diego coach Norv Turner would make a similar call.

"On film, time and time again, you watch it and think, 'Can I shoot that? Can I shoot that?' " Lewis said. "They ran that play earlier, and I should've shot it then, but I didn't – I kind of slid outside. But when the game's on the line, it's 'Shoot it!' When it comes down to it, people stick to who they are, and that's who they are."

So Lewis, unbeknownst to his coaches or teammates, made the executive decision to ignore his assigned responsibility and play the hunch. For San Diego fans, it was a play that undoubtedly evoked memories of another future Hall of Fame linebacker, longtime Chargers great Junior Seau(notes), whose penchant for guessing – and guessing correctly a high percentage of the time – was unrivaled.

"It's a gamble," Lewis admitted later. "If you don't play the play, you walk away saying, 'Damn, I should've played that play.' So I played it."

Few defensive players have ever left such an indelible image on a franchise. In 2000 Lewis was the driving force behind a record-setting defense and the Ravens' only Super Bowl triumph. Last season, out of nowhere, Lewis nearly did it again, ultimately guiding the revived Ravens to the AFC title game before they were taken out by the Pittsburgh Steelers.

This year, with Baltimore and second-year quarterback Joe Flacco(notes) showing surprising signs of offensive explosiveness – the Ravens have scored 69 points and gained 812 yards in two games – Lewis is once again thinking big.

"This is the type of win that can give you that snowball effect, man," he said. "I've been in games where you hold people to 150 yards – that's cute. Stats are pretty, but when you don't win, you're sick. Keeping them out of the end zone as many times as we did, that's championship football."

While allowing Rivers to complete 25 of 45 passes with two touchdown throws, Lewis and the Ravens clamped down when it counted most. Four times, the Chargers got to the Baltimore 10 or closer and had to settle for field goals.

From start to finish, Lewis was a constant menace. He had a game-high 12 tackles (10 unassisted, three for loss), forced a fumble and provoked a Rivers interception with a furious rush on San Diego's first drive of the second half.

He's the 21st century's consummate Purple People Eater, and it's strange to think that Lewis could be wearing a different uniform if things had played out differently over the offseason. During free agency, as he admittedly flirted with other franchises, there was talk of him signing with the Dallas Cowboys or New York Jets or being lured away by a less-obvious suitor. In the end, he re-upped with the Ravens for a reported $22 million over three years, which on Sunday looked like a pretty good deal for the organization. After the game, Lewis insisted he never seriously considered bolting. "No way," he said.

"Football's too easy here. I'm building bowling alleys and Hope Centers in my city. I'm gonna move away from that? Hell no. I ain't going through no carousel."

He's still Baltimore's E-ticket, in a way that few non-quarterbacks have ever been for any franchise. Consider that a few minutes after the game it was he, rather than second-year coach John Harbaugh, who was the first to address reporters at the podium next to the Baltimore locker room. I've been covering the NFL for more than two decades, and before Sunday I'd seen that happen, as far as I can remember, zero times.

When Lewis got back to the locker room, he was as unfiltered and enthusiastic as a kid who'd just won his first NFL game. "You like that?" Lewis yelled to veteran defensive end Trevor Pryce.

Said Pryce: "I'm sitting there, like, where the [expletive] did you come from? I thought that [expletive] was fake. I'm like, 'Hell no. That didn't just happen.' "

Later, Lewis said, "I mean, fourth and the game? I promise you, that was one of the greatest plays of my career."

"That was the greatest play I've ever seen," Pryce said. "Seriously."

Suggs emerged from the shower and gave his perspective on the play: "I was trying to beat the [right] tackle with a swim move, and it didn't work out so good. I was thinking, 'Oh [expletive],' 'cause if Ray doesn't make the play it might've been touchdown Chargers."

Lewis smiled and shook his head. "God gets the credit, man. I shot it. It's over. My part is done. Let's go home."

An hour later, Lewis and his teammates were literally sky-high, beginning a cross-country flight that was sure to be festive, a world of possibilities on the horizon.

As the man who made it all possible said shortly before leaving the stadium, "Life doesn't get any better."

More than just D: Balanced Ravens now scaring defenses

By Jim Corbett
USA Today
September 23, 2009

Baltimore Ravens safety Ed Reed summed up his team's 2-0 start that could grow to 3-0 Sunday against the 0-2 Cleveland Browns.

"We've been doing it for a while," Reed said. "We're building something."

That "something" could be a balanced championship contender capable of overtaking their fierce AFC North rival — the reigning Super Bowl champion Pittsburgh Steelers.

The Ravens are no longer a defensive-reliant team.

They've scored 69 points, second most in the league behind the explosive New Orleans Saints, triggered by Drew Brees' nine touchdown passes in two games. That balanced offense is key to a team that travels well. Baltimore improved to 7-4 on the road (including playoffs) under coach John Harbaugh after their 31-26 win against the San Diego Chargers in Week 2.

Ray Lewis, their 10-time Pro Bowl linebacker and heart-and-soul leader, made the game-winning play when he smothered Chargers running back Darren Sproles for a 5-yard loss on fourth-and-2 from Baltimore's 15-yard line with 37 seconds left.

"I told my teammates we would not lose this game," Lewis said. "That was probably one of the greatest plays in my career because of my team, because of what we did as a team."

The Ravens might not rush the passer as well or be as strong on the corners as they were under Rex Ryan. The defense never ranked lower than sixth during the New York Jets coach's 2005-2008 tenure as Ravens defensive coordinator.

Chargers receiver Vincent Jackson said Reed has a reputation for gambling and that San Diego quarterback Philip Rivers exploited the Ravens' cornerbacks over the top in shredding their secondary for a career-best 436 passing yards with two touchdowns.

But this Ravens defense has a safety net in offensive coordinator Cam Cameron's balanced unit, which can win a game passing, running or mixing both as Baltimore did against the banged-up Chargers (1-1).

The Ravens' challenge this offseason was finding a way to overcome the Steelers, who beat them three times last season, including in the AFC Championship Game.

"Baltimore is the team to beat in the AFC," NFL Network analyst Steve Mariucci said on NFL GameDay Final. "We know they play defense. They've got a good young quarterback, they can run. They are a complete football team."

In a Week 1 win against the Kansas City Chiefs, Cameron opened up the playbook and second-year quarterback Joe Flacco threw on the first six plays. Flacco finished 26-for-43 for a career-best 307 yards and three touchdowns.

Against the Chargers, Flacco threw for 190 yards and two touchdowns with an interception. But Willis McGahee, with a gamehigh 79 rushing yards and two touchdowns on 15 carries, headlined a 130-yard rushing effort.

"It's brilliant what Cam Cameron did in Week 1," ESPN analyst Trent Dilfer said. "What he did was establish a pattern where they're willing to throw first.

"Now what they've just done for their opponents for the next three, four weeks, they've completely rewritten the game plans.

"By throwing it 43 times once, it allows them the luxury of running it more. 'Go ahead, come up and load the box against these receivers you don't think are very good. We're not going to pound our heads against the wall. We're going to take our shots passing — and make you pay when you do.' "

They might not have the most feared receiving corps or shutdown cornerbacks in Fabian Washington and Domonique Foxworth. But they have veteran playmakers on defense in Lewis, Reed, linebacker Terrell Suggs and up-and-coming defensive lineman Haloti Ngata. They have a healthy two-time Pro Bowl tight end in Todd Heap and a dual-threat tailback in Ray Rice.

And they have a big-play leader who thrives on making game-saving plays.

"He's a great player, and any time he's untouched, you expect him to make a play," Rivers said.

But Rivers exposed the Ravens' vulnerability when he arced a perfect, 35-yard touchdown pass to Vincent Jackson over triple coverage. He also completed big-play passes of 81, 45, 38 and 37 yards.

"Rivers made some plays against us I haven't seen in the past two years," Harbaugh said, alluding to a need for Reed to know when not to take chances. We can play the coverage in a more together fashion and help those corners out a little bit better than we did. We've got to get better because people are going to exploit the big-play issues."

Still, the Ravens prevailed because they held Nate Kaeding to four field goals on five Chargers drives inside their 20-yard line.

"Bottom line is, when we didn't let them in that end zone, that's our victory," Lewis says. "That's championship football."

Time will tell if they're good enough to play championship football in January and February.

Ravens' off-the-field opponent: the schedule

Over the next 3 weeks, they will face teams coming off their own bye

By Jamison Hensley
The Baltimore Sun
October 27, 2009

Coming off their bye, the Ravens face the Denver Broncos, Cincinnati Bengals and Cleveland Browns.

But there's another familiar opponent: the NFL schedule makers.

The Ravens (3-3) must deal with the disadvantage of playing three teams coming off their own bye over the next three weeks, a scheduling quirk not shared by any other AFC North team. They face the unbeaten Broncos at home after Denver's bye and then travel to the Bengals (5-2) and the Browns (1-6) after each has received an extra week of rest.

Unlike some fans, Ravens officials aren't buying into an NFL conspiracy against Baltimore.

"I don't think the league has treated us unfairly," Ravens president Dick Cass told The Baltimore Sun. "The league has to consider so many variables in creating the schedule that each year there are some anomalies in the schedule."

Scheduling "anomalies" with the Ravens date to the 2000 season, when the Ravens played five of their first seven games on the road (including three away games in a row). The next year, the Ravens became one of the few Super Bowl champions of this decade not to have their season opener on national television.

Last season, the NFL rescheduled the Ravens' game at Houston because of Hurricane Ike from Week 2 to Week 10. That took away the Ravens' bye that season and forced them to play 15 straight games without a break (including a stretch of five road games in six weeks).

This year is different because the Ravens aren't the only team with bye-week difficulties. The Atlanta Falcons play four teams coming off byes this season, and the Broncos, Jacksonville Jaguars and Tennessee Titans face three teams after their byes.

The Ravens have received several letters from fans voicing their displeasure over this bye-week slight. One fan even sent an e-mail to NFL commissioner Roger Goodell about this issue.

"Constructing the schedule is an extraordinarily complex challenge, and we make every attempt to minimize such occurrences," NFL spokesman Brian McCarthy said. "There are other teams that are in similar situations. It is a function of 32 teams having byes in a span of seven weeks."

The Ravens, who are 1 1/2 games behind the Bengals and Pittsburgh Steelers in the AFC North, have had a solid working relationship with the league over the years. The NFL has tried to give the Ravens a midseason bye after years of receiving an early one. It also avoided scheduling a Monday night game for them at Pittsburgh this year after doing so three of the previous four years.

Still, playing three teams coming off byes is an unfavorable stretch. This season, teams are 8-4 (.667) after their bye.

The Ravens' bye-week advantage is negated by the fact that the Broncos had off last week, too. Then, the Ravens must go on the road to play two division teams, the Bengals (who haven't won a game after their bye since 2003) and Browns (who have won three of their past four games after their bye).

"If you're coming off a bye and the other team is playing, then it probably could be perceived as an advantage from the standpoint that you get a little rest and recover from injuries," coach John Harbaugh said Monday, the first day that players returned to practice. "But there might be a plus in playing because it keeps momentum going and you're sharp."

The Ravens came into their bye losing three straight games by a combined 11 points.

Some players used the four days off to get away. Others - about 75 percent by Harbaugh's estimation - remained around team headquarters.

"All we can focus on is what we can do to get better," tight end Todd Heap said. "I think we came in this week with that mind-set in our bye week, thinking, 'Let's review everything we've gone over. Everybody review what you did yourself. Analyze your own job and what you're doing out on the field.' That's what we've got to do this week - really put the magnifying glass on ourselves."

The Ravens were in a similar position last season, when they started 2-0 before losing three consecutive games. They rallied to win nine of their last 11 regular-season games.

"Just because this team went through it last year doesn't mean that it's going to carry them this year to any great heights. That is something you have to make happen," Harbaugh said. "We control our destiny. We control what we're going to be this year. It's our responsibility and our challenge. I think guys are excited about it."

Flacco remains unflappable

By Elizabeth Merrill

BALTIMORE -- K.C. Keeler, a man who wears sunglasses at night but has impeccable vision, likes to tell this story. It's about Joe Flacco. Before the University of Delaware unveiled a 30-foot poster of Flacco in its stadium, before he quietly captivated the NFL, Flacco walked into Keeler's office just before the start of spring football. He told the Delaware coach he was pondering playing baseball, because he was a senior now and every prudent man has a Plan B, and Keeler's mouth dropped wide open.

"Joe, do you realize that the scouts are coming in?" Keeler said.

Do you realize, Joe, that you will be an NFL draft pick next year?

Flacco paused, and gave his coach a puzzled look.

"Really?"

The kid keeps his cool
There is no way to explain it. How Joe Flacco went unnoticed for the first 22½ years of his life, then led the Baltimore Ravens to the AFC Championship Game as a rookie last season. How Flacco is head-and-shoulders better in 2009, Pro Bowl-caliber better, after playing on just one winning team before last season and riding the bench for much of his college career.

It leads Flacco and his dad Steve to wonder how many more castoffs are out there, working 9-to-5 jobs because they didn't fit a prototype or change a coach's mind. Flacco thinks about it every time he passes by a TV and a UFL game is on. He wonders how close he was to that same anonymity.

"We'll be driving back from Baltimore," Steve Flacco says, "and he'll look at me like, 'Oh my God … if I was looking for an accounting job right now, you don't know how miserable I'd be.' First of all, he'd be unemployed. And it would be hard to watch football games."

The thing is, Flacco never doubted he had the talent to play in the NFL. He'd call his dad during the pride-swallowing days at the University of Pittsburgh, saying it made him "sick to his stomach" that he wasn't getting the chance to play. He'd stun everybody at the end of the Ravens' training camp last year, when the team's top two quarterbacks went down and Flacco just shrugged his shoulders when he was called in to start, after taking just a handful of snaps. "Cool, I get to play," was the attitude Steve sensed from his oldest boy before his first NFL start.

Flacco absorbed the playbook so quickly that he was helping veterans brush up on new offensive coordinator Cam Cameron's system.

"I don't know that I'm different than anybody else," Flacco says. "I realize that I'm in a situation that is a great one. I'm an NFL quarterback. There's only 32 guys in the world who get to do this, and I'm one of them. So you'd better not mess it up."

He has a 6-foot-6 frame and one of the strongest arms in the NFL. He's a 24-year-old with a 40-something's brain. That's what sets him apart, Baltimore quarterbacks coach Hue Jackson says: his head. Flacco has turned down dozens of endorsements because he figures he makes enough money playing football and doesn't want to waste his time on the extracurriculars. (Steve Flacco proudly says that nearly all of his son's $8.75 million in guaranteed money is socked away in savings).

Flacco went to a Super Bowl party in the offseason, and hung with the schmoozers and NFL elite. It should be noted that he wasn't there by choice; he was nudged to go and pick up an award. By the end of the night, he could be found standing off to the side with his girlfriend, eyeballing the exits.

"I met him at one of the Super Bowl events, and I was very impressed by his character and the way he handled himself," says Green Bay Packers quarterback Aaron Rodgers, "which I think says a lot about a person as a leader and as a quarterback. You need to have a good head on your shoulders to be able to inspire the guys around you."

And inspired they were. The Ravens were coming off a 5-11 season when Flacco arrived, and he helped turn the franchise around by throwing for 2,971 yards, 14 touchdowns and 12 interceptions in 2008. He found a perfect connection with Cameron, who mentored Philip Rivers to a 14-2 record in his first season as San Diego's starter.

Cameron tried to bring Flacco along at a comfortable pace in 2008. In Year 2, it's obvious he's allowing his young quarterback to let it fly. Through six games, Flacco has thrown for 1,674 yards with 11 touchdowns and five interceptions. He's completed 64.4 percent of his passes, and nearly willed the Ravens back from a 17-point deficit against the Vikings on Oct. 18, slinging for 196 yards in the fourth quarter.

In that game, Flacco was hit nine times, rolled his ankle and had his foot stepped on twice. As he trudged off the field after a 33-31 loss, coach John Harbaugh found him and said it was a performance more suited for a 15-year veteran.

It's what the Ravens have come to expect from Flacco, says Jackson, so they keep pumping him with more information and watch his rapid progression.

"With his ceiling, I think he has the opportunity to be one of the better players in this league by far," Jackson says. "This young man works as hard anybody I've been around, is as focused as anybody I've been around, and is as talented as anybody I've been around.

"I have not detected anything that is tough for him. I just haven't."

'Joe's not afraid to fail'
A woman e-mailing the Ravens' public relations department says she's angry. She's watched Joe Flacco dazzle on television, and then the TV cameras zoom to his family, which is seated in the third deck of M&T Bank Stadium. Can't the Ravens find a better place for the star quarterback's parents to sit?

She doesn't know that the Flaccos like to sit there, in the sea, so they can take in the entire view. They meet at an out-of-the-way diner after home games, 20-plus strong. There's his little brother, who likes to tease Joe about his awkward way of celebrating touchdowns. There are grandparents with old stories and new memories. There's Steve, who likes to break down the game with Joe when he arrives, after a shower and postgame interviews.

This, people closest to Flacco say, is how he stays grounded. He's the oldest of six kids, and spends many an offseason day at his parents' house in South Jersey, eating his mom Karen's lasagne, letting her do his laundry.

"I don't know if I'd call him shy. He just doesn't seek attention in any way," says his agent, Joe Linta. "He has a very dry sense of humor. He's very comfortable in his own skin."

Flacco never had a problem finding a game as a kid growing up in Audubon, N.J. He had a batting cage and tires to run through in his yard. By his sophomore year in high school, he was 6-4 and a gangly 155 pounds. But he could stand past the 50-yard line and throw a football through the uprights.

The college scouts rarely saw this because, well, Flacco wasn't necessarily surrounded by a ton of talent. He had zero winning seasons in high school, and took weekly beatings from opposing defenders. He is so good at what he does now, Steve says, because he spent his entire life preparing for it, navigating through the toughest roads.

"But, now, listen to me when I tell you this," Steve says. "When he was in high school, and even in college, people would tell you, 'Oh, he doesn't have enough fire in him because he doesn't get upset and he doesn't scream and yell.' And why doesn't he scream and yell? Because that's not how you get things done at the quarterback position.

"You've got to be a stone-cold killer. Our thing is, dude, nobody sees you sweat. You're the quarterback. You do not sweat. Nothing bothers you."

But warming the bench as an underclassman at Pitt did bother Flacco, because he believed he was better than his competition. He wasn't bragging when he said it; Flacco considered it fact. He'd call his dad and say he was wasting his time watching behind Tyler Palko.

Flacco eventually left Pitt and had to sit his first year at Delaware. When he finally got his chance to play as a junior in 2006, his team finished 5-6, and Flacco wondered if he'd ever get noticed.

Then came an 8-3 senior season, when Flacco threw for 3,300 yards and became one of the most accurate passers in college football that season. He threw for 434 yards and four touchdowns against Navy. Draftniks had him going as high as the second round. Baltimore, enamored with his cool demeanor and a nearly flawless workout, traded up to get him as the 18th overall pick of the first round.

Despite all the optimism, Flacco didn't want to have a party on draft day. He knew what could happen when his fate was in somebody else's hands. He eventually agreed to do a news conference at the elementary school two houses down from his parents' home. Just a few hours before his name was called, the school caught on fire.

The Flaccos eventually had a chuckle over that. Could it be another sign that more bad luck was coming?

"After they drafted him, I can remember [Baltimore's coaches] asking me, 'Can we play this guy early?'" Keeler says. "I said, 'Yeah, you know what? You won't damage him. He's not a delicate flower. He's a man. If he doesn't perform well as a rookie, he'll live with it and move on.'

"To this day, I often use Joe's philosophy, that you can't be afraid to fail. When I talk to youth football groups, I tell them about Joe. Joe's not afraid to fail. That's a great philosophy to have. That's something I'll take with me forever."

Fitting in
How could he fail? He had Cameron, an offensive whiz, behind him. He had a defense that was feared by the rest of the NFL, and none other than Ray Lewis behind him. And that surprised just about everybody.

The defensive guys in Baltimore, some say, can be tough on their quarterbacks. They've seen so many come to town and fail: the Scott Mitchells and Elvis Grbacs and Chris Redmans. But when a handful of players were clamoring for Troy Smith, Lewis stood up and said Flacco was their guy.

They are seemingly complete opposites, from their pregame entrances to their NFL résumés. But Lewis saw what the Ravens would eventually know: Flacco was the man to finally bring stability to the quarterback position. Flacco says their mutual respect isn't all that strange. They want the same things, he says.

"I think when Ray kind of showed the rest of the team that he respected me, they accepted me," Flacco says. "It made it easier on the rest of the guys to do the same and follow behind him.

"They're a bunch of tough guys, and football is a tough game. And in order to play it, you need to make sure you have a tough guy leading your team at quarterback. Anytime you can gain the respect of a bunch of tough guys, a bunch of guys who love to play the game, it means a lot."

With Flacco's arm, plus a stout running game and the NFL's most feared defense, many observers wondered if anyone could stop the Ravens. But three teams in the NFL have, snatching down-to-the-wire games that have dropped Baltimore to 3-3. As usual, Flacco's demeanor hasn't changed. He gathered the offense in the locker room after a heartbreaking loss to Cincinnati earlier this month and simply said, "Let's go to work."

"That's Joe," says Ravens veteran center Matt Birk. "That's just how he is all the time. It's genuine. What you see is what you get with him, and you can respect that. No matter what's going on, he's always calm and seems to be always in control."

The popular jersey choice
It is a warm fall day in Baltimore, and the tailgaters are preparing for another Flacco show. The hip thing to do these days is to buy a No. 5 jersey from Delaware, and wear your Blue Hens pride, because then it looks as if you've known all along that Flacco was destined to be the Ravens' franchise quarterback.

"He reminds me so much of Joe Montana," Ravens fan Jonathan Thomas says as he knocks back a Bud Lite in the M&T Bank Stadium parking lot. "I mean, we've been starving for a quarterback. I think this town just wanted a quarterback so bad. Flacco's definitely the man."

His jersey is the best seller in Baltimore, fifth-hottest in all of the NFL. Flacco thinks it's strange, seeing people walking around town in his jersey. "But it's a good thing," he says. "It's nothing I'm against."

In some ways, it reminds him of where he was and where he could've been.

"I obviously believe in my ability to play football," Flacco says. "I've always believed I can do it if you give me a chance."

Sporting News Conversation: Ravens linebacker Ray Lewis

By Steve Greenberg
Sporting News
October 28, 2009

It's been an up-and-down season already for 10-time Pro Bowler Ray Lewis, the definitive middle linebacker of his generation. Up came in September by way of a 3-0 record for the Ravens, with Lewis providing a momentous highlight in Week 2: a fourth-down mauling of San Diego running back Darren Sproles on the favored Chargers' final possession. Down came in October with a controversial defeat at New England (what's the penalty for breathing on Tom Brady?) and similarly frustrating losses to the Bengals and Vikings.

In Week 5, Cincinnati's Cedric Benson became the first player to rush for 100 yards vs. Baltimore in 40 games, ending a streak of which Lewis was immensely proud. (The Lewis-led Ravens also held runners without a 100-yard day for 50 straight games from 1998-2001.) The following week, Minnesota's Adrian Peterson made it two 100-yard rushers in a row.

But Lewis' confidence remains in full bloom, as was evident throughout a lengthy interview with Steve Greenberg.

SN: Are you still at the top of your game?
Lewis: Easily. That's the beauty of it. Being at the top of your game means really feeling your influence over others, your influence over how you play the game, how your coaches grade you, how other players respect you. Not this or that outside source, but inside the game. ... That's what happens when you play amongst men who need you to be more than who you are. Your game changes. Even Rod Woodson will tell you his best year he had as a professional was when he was 36 years old. If you think about why, you're much wiser. The game slows down. You don't have to waste energy anymore -- it's now conserved because you're always in the right place.

SN: Peyton Manning, Tom Brady, Brett Favre -- everyone starts with them when talking about the best players of this era. Where should you fit into the discussion?
Lewis: That's the thing -- everybody just names quarterbacks. It's so easy to do that. "Ooh, he threw for 4,000 yards and so many touchdowns." That's the glamour of the game. I've always had one goal when I came into this business. I don't believe in the course of a game that a man can touch the ball 25, 30 times and get 100 yards on me. I'm the quarterback of the defense -- that's my record. I'm talking about 50 straight games and another streak of (39) games.

SN: Do you think anyone has played your position as well as you?
Lewis: Well, you know, I'll tell you this, from day one -- from college to this day -- I've been chasing something. And not in a disrespectful way. I've never slowed down anyone else's path. I try to help guys like (the 49ers') Patrick Willis, (the Seahawks') Lofa Tatupu, (the Browns') D'Qwell Jackson. I mentor them. And I don't like to judge myself against anybody. But, at the end of the day, I want to be the greatest player ever to strap it on. Not just because I was able to make plays, but to do that and to influence men, the souls of men, the spirits of men, the willingness of men.

SN: Who is your successor as the game's next great middle linebacker?
Lewis: I like Willis. But I use this example a lot: You don't ask Chuck Norris if he can beat Bruce Lee. Do you got great skills? Yes. Are you both deadly? Yes. But there's only once Bruce. I tell Patrick, "There's only one lion right now." I love watching the Serengeti, the way lions live. The only way the king lion loses his crown is by somebody physically defeating him. That, for me, is the easiest thing about my game and football -- they have to beat me as a man, and I just don't think anybody's working that hard.

SN: When was the last time you felt as good on the field -- as thrilled -- as you did on that game-saving hit on the Chargers' Darren Sproles in Week 2?
Lewis: Aw, man. Incredible. You can take a million linebackers across this country -- fast, strong, whatever -- and they don't make that play because it all comes with the mastery, with years of studying, never getting comfortable, six, seven hours a day loading up the film. When that play (ended) I looked at my teammates and ran to them. It's like laying your greatest masterpiece on something that was already so great -- like Bruce Lee and The Last Dragon. Oh, my gosh! That play took everybody who saw it on a quick rewind. Fourteen years! And he sticks him! I'm not going anywhere until the good Lord has me stop ticking. Then I'll walk away from the game willingly.

SN: It's been over three months since your friend Steve McNair was killed. How much is he on your mind?
Lewis: I don't forget him. I talk to his mom every Sunday, tell her, "You lost one son, but you've got another one here. We've all got to close our eyes someday. The Lord knew this day was coming and knew we were going to have these conversations." We talk. She tells me she loves me. She says, "Go do what you do." He never leaves my mind and my heart.

SN: Will a man of your powerful voice and leadership ability work for change in the community? Is that something you want to do with your life?
Lewis: That's what I'm doing. I train the Baltimore police officers every Tuesday night. It's a huge camp about physical fitness. Mind, body and spirit. I work their behinds, and they look at me like, "What the heck?" I go where the gangs are to talk about their influence. I want to talk to people who write music: Stop writing about material things; write about love, hope, dedication, sacrifice. You've been given a table --what are you doing with it? If people are listening, are they striving to be better person? It's the same thing when you're a public speaker. That's why I like going into the 'hood. I work out with these homeless men on Wednesdays. When they start getting tired, I'm like, "Look, success, or whatever you're looking for, ain't on the outside -- it's inside! I do so much people never know about, but I love it that way because it affects people differently.

SN: Where do you think your school, Miami, is headed under Randy Shannon?
Lewis: In the right direction. That guy was my first linebackers coach, and he was a hell of a leader then. And me briefly watching what he's doing now, I am very impressed. He has lot of young talent. And he knows what to do with it.

SN: It's doubtful the Colts regret drafting Marvin Harrison at No. 19 in 1996, but how many of those other teams regret letting you fall to No. 26?
Lewis: I remember that year, man. I watched all the big names go by. I can almost go through the whole first round. I said, "I will remember these things." Keyshawn Johnson one, Kevin Hardy two, Simeon Rice three, Cedric Jones five. (The Ravens selected offensive tackle Jonathan Ogden with the fourth pick.) At No. 20, I'm thinking the Dolphins are going to take me, then they take Daryl Gardener. I'm like, "Man, they don't know what's inside me!" I wasn't the biggest, the strongest or the fastest, but not one man was going to outwork me. So look at it now.

SN: How do you hope to be remembered?
Lewis: As one of the greatest servers ever, as a man who honored life, who honored his job and did nothing else but want to find a different way to help somebody. If I get this done before I leave this earth, I pray I hear those five words: "Well done, my humble servant."

Ravens turning to youth movement at linebacker

Gooden, McClain, Ellerbe might represent wave of the future

By Ken Murray
The Baltimore Sun
October 28, 2009

When the Ravens lost veteran linebacker Bart Scott to a free-agent raid by their former defensive coordinator last March, they turned his position over to a second-year player with just a handful of snaps on an NFL defense.

At least Tavares Gooden was a draft pick (third round, 2008); Scott had been an undrafted surprise in 2002 who eventually earned a Pro Bowl invitation and a big payday.

Gooden, 25, has made steady progress, along with the expected growing pains, in his first season as weak-side starter. On a proud defense that has developed certain age issues, he is part of the turn toward youthful linebackers.

Right behind Gooden is rookie Dannell Ellerbe, 23, another of those promising, undrafted talents the Ravens gravitate toward. Jameel McClain, 24, the backup to Ray Lewis at middle linebacker, is another player who went undrafted but fit the Ravens' mold.

Those three - Gooden, McClain and Ellerbe - represent the future, perhaps, of the Ravens' linebacking corps. Whether they make up for the loss of Scott in the overall defense is another issue, but they'll be tested again Sunday when the undefeated Denver Broncos come to M&T Bank Stadium.

"I think they're doing a great job," defensive coordinator Greg Mattison said this month. "I think they continually work [hard]. All I can go by is when they're in the game, how they play, and then what they do during the week to prepare. They work tremendously hard. They always know they're a step away from being in there full time, just like Ellerbe was against the Patriots."

Ellerbe was pressed into emergency service in New England in Week 4 when Brendon Ayanbadejo, starting for an injured Gooden, tore his left quadriceps. Ellerbe delivered six tackles in his first NFL game.

The loss of Ayanbadejo, 33, for the season not only hurt the Ravens on special teams, but it also cost the defense a key player. He was playing in all the sub-packages at linebacker, and he was playing well.

With the Ravens minus Ayanbadejo, Gooden has gotten more snaps than coaches think he should.

"At some point, we'd like to not have [Gooden] play all the plays, so he doesn't get worn out," linebackers coach Vic Fangio said. "We've got a capable guy [Ellerbe] who can go in and play some. And the more you split those guys up, the more you can help the special teams, too, because they'll stay fresher for special teams."

Ellerbe has nine tackles in three games. He might be more physical than Gooden, but Gooden (27 tackles) brings more speed to the defense.

"I feel I could get meaningful minutes," Ellerbe said. "I feel like whenever they need me to step in, I just want them to have that trust. I'm just waiting."

A knee injury took Ellerbe out of the mix in training camp, and he essentially lost six weeks.

"Because it was a knee injury, he couldn't condition very well," Fangio said. "I think he got out of tip-top football shape, which is what he was in prior to the injury. So that became an issue. You go five, six weeks without getting any reps, things become rusty and aren't as second nature as they need to be. I think he's getting back to being comfortable there."

Ellerbe became an NFL prospect at Georgia after moving to middle linebacker from the outside. He was projected as a middle-round pick in April but fell out of the draft because of character issues.

As a 20-year-old freshman in Athens, he drove a teammate's car into a tree and was charged with DUI, underage possession of alcohol, theft of a motor vehicle and giving false information to police. He got two days in jail, two years of probation and a three-game suspension from the team at the start of 2006.

Gooden had a season-high eight tackles in the loss at Minnesota in Week 6. His strength and weakness were evident on the same play in that game. He got caught out of position on a breakout run by the Vikings' Adrian Peterson but ran him down 58 yards later, preventing a touchdown.

"He's improving," Fangio said of Gooden, "but I still think he can improve a lot more."

Like Ellerbe, McClain is waiting his turn. Rex Ryan, the former Ravens defensive coordinator who signed Scott after he became head coach of the New York Jets, worked McClain into the defense a year ago as a pass rusher. The Philadelphia native contributed 2.5 sacks, eight solo tackles and two safeties in his cameo role at outside linebacker.

Mattison moved him inside in the offseason, but McClain's role continues to grow. He backs up Lewis in the middle and Jarret Johnson at strong-side linebacker in some sub-packages, and he plays on special teams (he's tied for the team lead with 12 tackles).

"Jameel hasn't gotten as many opportunities as the other guys," Fangio said. "He's got a lot on his plate. We have to be careful how much we expect him to know and learn. ... [But] he's a smart player, has good instincts and a good feel for the game. And he understands football."

McClain demonstrated his ability to get to the quarterback last season and hopes for another opportunity.

"Now I'm playing more positions," he said. "I'm more focused on [middle] and [strong-side linebacker], and hopefully I'll get an opportunity to rush."

Ravens' D playing 'angry' again

By James Walker
ESPN.com
November 1, 2009

BALTIMORE -- Terrell Suggs was a little confused Sunday.

The Pro Bowl linebacker/defensive end hybrid couldn't fathom why the Baltimore Ravens weren't considered the most feared defense entering their high-profile matchup with the Denver Broncos.

"That was the case today?" Suggs asked. "Wow! Look how times have changed."

Suggs' surprised response stemmed from Baltimore's dominant showing in a 30-7 victory over previously undefeated Denver. The win ended a six-game winning streak for the Broncos (6-1), who had frustrated opponents by pounding teams defensively the same way the Ravens (4-3) had in the past.

But the past became the present as Baltimore's defense best utilized its bye week by reverting to its nasty brand of physical football.

The Ravens rattled and confused Broncos quarterback Kyle Orton and held Denver to only 66 yards rushing. With the defense setting the tone,

Baltimore forced Denver into submission, which is something no other team this year had been able to do.

"They were coming off their bye week where they were the best team in the NFL, and we were coming off our bye week where we had three disappointing losses," Suggs said. "We had a whole week with that on our mind and we were just hungry. We were angry, and we very confident coming in."

Say what you want about the Ravens' defense. But first and foremost, it's a prideful group.

Some may disagree with their penchant for chest-thumping and brash talk, but the Ravens put a lot of hard work into building their defensive reputation through the years. Yet veterans such as Ray Lewis, Suggs and Ed Reed recently endured a lot of criticism for being the No. 19-ranked defense entering the game against Denver, which had held opponents to a league-low 11 points per game.

It's difficult to remember a time when so many people doubted Baltimore defensively. But Sunday's performance went a long way toward showing what its defense is still capable of.

"We have good players," Ravens coach John Harbaugh said. "It was fun to see them be able to do some things that they've been working hard to try and get done."

Denver's game plan played perfectly into the Ravens' hands. The teams that gave Baltimore the most trouble this year all had great quarterbacks who weren't afraid to challenge the Ravens vertically.

The Broncos are not a vertical team. They win with defense, field position and efficient play from Orton. But Baltimore made it look easy in beating Denver at its own game.

The Ravens stuffed the run and a majority of Denver's screens, leaving the Broncos with very few options. Orton completed 23 of 37 passes for 152 yards and generally looked confused and out of rhythm for the first time this season. The Ravens sacked Orton twice and hit him often enough to make him uncomfortable.

Baltimore's offense also played better in the second half, and the special teams had a big return to start the third quarter. Rookie defensive back Lardarius Webb scored the first touchdown of the game on a 95-yard kickoff return to give the Ravens a 13-0 lead. It jump-started Baltimore's run of 24 points in the second half.

Quarterback Joe Flacco completed 20 of 25 passes -- including 14 straight to end the game -- for 175 yards and a touchdown. The Ravens outgained Denver's offense 292-200, not including the big return.

"We have to be able to play tight defense no matter what we do," Reed said. "But give credit to our offense and special teams. There's no one side of the ball that can go without the other."

Last year Baltimore lost three games in a row early before making a run to the AFC Championship Game. If the Ravens continue to play defense at this level, there is no reason to believe they can't get hot once again.

A dominant performance against the Broncos is a good achievement. But the result is a setup to next week's huge division game against the first-place Cincinnati Bengals (5-2).

With the Bengals and Pittsburgh Steelers (5-2) on a bye, the Ravens gained a half-game in the standings to further tighten the AFC North race. It should be an interesting month of November as all three teams play each other over the next few weeks.

"They had a week off, [and] we know they're going to be really, really excited about seeing us coming in there, trying to go two up on us in the division," Lewis said of Cincinnati. "And the bottom line is, we understand what's in front of us."

Best & worst moments for the Ravens so far this season

By Jamison Hensley
The Baltimore Sun
November 15, 2009

Derrick Mason flashed a big grin when talking about a pressure-filled second half of the season. With only eight games remaining in the regular season - and perhaps his career - the veteran wide receiver expressed unexpected excitement as the Ravens sit at the crossroads of their season.

Their 4-4 mark at the midway point of the football calendar might be cause for concern for some teams. A second-half schedule that includes a showdown with the undefeated Indianapolis Colts and two meetings with the defending Super Bowl champion Pittsburgh Steelers might lead to some anxious faces in the locker room.

Yet the Ravens' attitude has been surprisingly loose. Their players remain remarkably calm.

"I'm very optimistic," Mason said of the team's playoff prospects. "It's a challenge, and that's what you want as a competitor. Whether you're cutting grass and the guy next door is cutting his grass faster, you want to cut your grass a little bit faster. So, it's always a challenge in whatever you do, and it brings out the best in you."

The Ravens have reached the halfway point of the season at 4-4 only two previous times in their 13-year history. Both seasons (1997 and 2007) resulted in second-half collapses. The Ravens finished 6-9-1 in 1997 and 5-11 in 2007.

The players acknowledge that their record puts them in a tough spot heading into the final stretch.

"It's going to really test our character moving forward," Mason said. "Are we going to give in, or are we going to continue to fight as a team? I believe we are going to continue to fight."

Middle linebacker Ray Lewis said the team has to "weather the storm" to be successful in the second half of the season.

"Weather whatever little things you're going through right now, so in the second half of the season we can be better," he said. "And I look at this Monday night [game against the Browns in Cleveland] the same way. It's a great opportunity to come out and see some things differently, but it's also a great opportunity to play real fast and not worry about anything. Just let the game take care of itself."

As the Ravens look ahead, here's a look back at the first half of their season:

Offensive Most Valuable Player: Running back Ray Rice. Some might make an argument for quarterback Joe Flacco, but Rice has been the motor of the Ravens' redesigned offense. He has accounted for 60 percent of the team's rushing yards (573 yards) and one-third of its catches (46). Of the Ravens' seven plays of 33 yards or more, Rice has produced five of them.

Defensive MVP: Outside linebacker Jarret Johnson. It was only a few seasons ago when everyone was worried about how the Ravens were going to replace Adalius Thomas. Instead of having Thomas' flash, Johnson has used hard work and determination to become the steadiest force on defense. His five sacks lead the Ravens.

High point: Routing the previously undefeated Denver Broncos. After losing three straight contests, the Ravens delivered a statement by beating the Broncos at their own game. From Lardarius Webb's kickoff-return touchdown at the start of the third quarter to Flacco's 14 straight completions to end the game, the Ravens finished off the NFL's most dominant second-half team.

Low point: Steve Hauschka misses a potential game-winning, 44-yard attempt in Minnesota. The Ravens' electric fourth-quarter rally - they trailed 27-10 with 10 minutes left - came to a crashing halt when Hauschka hooked a field-goal try on the last play of the game. If the Ravens fall one win short of the playoffs, this is the moment that will haunt them the most.

Low point, Part 2: The Ravens were penalized three times - which included Lewis' crushing hit on wide receiver Chad Ochocinco - on the Cincinnati Bengals' game-winning drive in a 17-14 loss Oct. 11.

Offense's unsung hero: Right guard Chris Chester. It was expected that Marshal Yanda would take back his job when he was fully healthy. But Chester's play made him the permanent starter.

Defense's unsung hero: Linebacker Brendon Ayanbadejo. The Pro Bowl special teams ace was making an unexpected impact on defense. He was the second-leading tackler on the team for the first quarter of the season before sustaining a season-ending leg injury.

Best offseason move: Trading up to draft Michael Oher. The Ravens gave a fifth-round pick to the New England Patriots to jump three spots to select Oher with the 23rd overall pick. A physical and relentless right tackle, Oher made Sports Illustrated's midseason All-Pro team.

Worst offseason move: Not re-signing Matt Stover. The Ravens decided not to retain Stover because of his age, veteran salary and inability to kick off effectively (which means using an extra roster spot on a kickoff specialist). So, in some respect, the Ravens sacrificed fourth-quarter consistency (Stover was 24-for-24 in the fourth quarter from 2006 to 2008) for having tight end L.J. Smith active.

Biggest surprise, offense: Eliminating Willis McGahee from the game plan. In the first four games, he led the NFL with seven touchdowns. In the past four games, he has 12 touches.

Biggest surprise, defense: Replacing Trevor Pryce in the starting lineup with Dwan Edwards. In 2007, Edwards started for Pryce when the four-time Pro Bowl defensive end was injured. Now, the Ravens are starting Edwards over Pryce because of performance.

Scariest moment: Jared Gaither motionless on the field at New England. The Gillette Stadium crowd fell silent Oct. 4 as the 6-foot-9 offensive tackle was put onto a stretcher and then carted away. Gaither missed only two games with the neck injury, but he still is feeling the effects of it today.

Most thrilling moment: Lewis' game-clinching tackle at San Diego. Shooting an inside gap on fourth down, Lewis wrapped his arms around running back Darren Sproles in the backfield with 30 seconds left to preserve a 31-26 victory.

Best call: Flacco's 31-yard touchdown pass to Mark Clayton that won the season opener. Facing an all-out blitz from the Kansas City Chiefs, the Ravens went for the jugular when Flacco hit Clayton on a post pattern to break a tie at 24 late in the fourth quarter. It was a high-risk, high-reward play call.

Worst call: Roughing-the-passer penalty on Terrell Suggs. The Ravens' defensive end-linebacker got flagged when he grazed the knee of New England quarterback Tom Brady. It was the fourth time in the first four games that the Ravens were flagged for roughing the passer.

Biggest hole filled: The Ravens' quarterback carousel has officially stopped. Flacco is on schedule to finish with the team's best single-season completion rate (64.9 percent) and quarterback rating (90.2). He also is on pace to have the second-most touchdowns and passing yards in a season for a Ravens quarterback.

Biggest hole remaining: Bart Scott's old linebacker spot. The Ravens are missing Scott more than most expected. They are trying to fill his void with three linebackers: Tavares Gooden, Dannell Ellerbe and Jameel McClain.

Oher's coming attraction not a distraction

Ravens offensive lineman takes in stride the new movie about his life

By Dan Connolly
The Baltimore Sun
November 16, 2009

Ravens offensive lineman Michael Oher shrugs his massive shoulders when asked about his life story - one considered so compelling it's the subject of the movie "The Blind Side" scheduled to open nationwide this week.

It's a Hollywood version of Oher's incredible journey from destitute, uneducated Memphis teen to college graduate and millionaire starting right tackle for the Ravens. Based on Michael Lewis' best-selling book of the same name, the Warner Bros. movie highlights Oher's close relationship with the rich white family that helped change his life.

But Oher, 23, hasn't yet made plans to see the premiere Tuesday in New York - the day after the Ravens play at the Cleveland Browns on "Monday Night Football." Nor has he set a date to catch it at a local theater when it opens here Friday.

"I am not curious. I am not in a hurry to see it," said the 6-foot-4, 310-pound Oher, who was selected by the Ravens with the 23rd overall pick in April's draft. "But I will watch it eventually."

It's not that he's opposed to the movie or embarrassed by its premise.

"I am never ashamed of where I came from," Oher said. "Where I came from, a lot of people don't make it out. I think it has made me a tougher person, a better player."

Those close to him, however, are plenty interested in this film.

His Memphis family is promoting the movie along with the filmmakers and the studio. Some of Oher's teammates have teased him about the film, which stars Sandra Bullock as his adoptive mother.

They're all doing their best to leave Oher out of the hoopla - if that's what he wants. Because while he is believed to be the first rookie in North American professional sports to go through a season while having his life immortalized in a major motion picture, Oher still has a job to do in the NFL.

That's his singular focus. Not this new movie.

"It's not going to be a distraction, because it is not a bad thing," Ravens veteran wide receiver Derrick Mason said when asked if the film could put pressure on his rookie teammate. "He lived the life, so he is concentrating on playing football."

Oher's reaction to all this interest in his life was much the same when Lewis' book came out in 2006. It took several years before Oher decided to read the book, according to Sean Tuohy, his adoptive father. And his review was lukewarm.

"Some things [are] in it that are the truth, some things are not," Oher said. "People have got to do things to sell it. But everything is good, though."

He does have a passion for movies - Oher likes most genres and considers the original "Godfather" his all-time favorite.

As for "The Blind Side," Oher has had seven years to get beyond that stone-silent, confused 16-year-old portrayed in the movie, Tuohy said. That kid has moved on now, Tuohy said, so if Oher misses the premiere, it's not a big deal.

"If he doesn't go, it's not like this major decision on his part, that's just the way it worked out," Tuohy said. "Whether he is going to eat a sandwich or a piece of chicken probably has just as much importance."

It's just another example of the single-mindedness that allowed Oher to succeed against incalculable odds, Tuohy said.

"Michael was blessed with the unbelievable ability to just not worry about what happened yesterday," Tuohy said. "His mind is always on the next issue and you've got to believe that's how he made it through adversity, because if he is out there worrying about the past, he would have never gotten up the next day."

Oher was one of 13 children born to a mother addicted to crack cocaine. His biological father was never part of his life and eventually was found murdered, thrown off an overpass in West Memphis.

In Oher's first nine years of schooling, he attended at least 11 different institutions. He repeated first and second grades. He was in and out of foster homes, often fleeing and returning to his mother.

His life changed at 16 when he accompanied a friend and his friend's father on a drive to Briarcrest Christian School, an expensive Evangelical institution in East Memphis. The friend's father wanted to take his son out of the public school system, and decided to also take Oher, who had been sleeping on the family's floor for weeks. One look at the massive Oher intrigued the Briarcrest football coach, who lobbied for the boy's admission based on the school's Christian mission. Oher entered Briarcrest with a 0.6 grade point average, but with tutoring and special assistance, he lifted his grades high enough to participate in athletics.

While at Briarcrest, Oher met Tuohy, a former standout point guard at the University of Mississippi and now a fast-food magnate, and his family. Tuohy's wife, Leigh Anne, took a personal interest in Oher's struggles, inviting him to live with the family, buying him clothes and ultimately becoming the mother - kind, authoritative, unrelenting - who Oher craved.

By his senior year, Oher was one of the top football recruits in the nation, eventually accepting a full scholarship to Ole Miss, where he made the chancellor's honor roll for academic excellence.

Leigh Anne Tuohy's relationship with her adopted son is what drives the movie, which pairs Bullock with newcomer Quinton Aaron, who plays the shy Oher. John Lee Hancock, the film's writer and director, describes the movie as more of a "mother-son story" than a football film.

"I think Michael had a much greater impact on our lives than we did on his," Leigh Anne Tuohy said in a statement. She plans to attend the New York premiere Tuesday along with her husband and their two other children.

"You take so much in life for granted," she said. "We viewed life differently after he joined our family."

Sean Tuohy said the characters in the movie are secondary to its message: Given the proper support, faith and love, anyone can thrive.

"We just think we happen to be the people in it," Tuohy said. "The movie is really about people and how they value other people. Michael just happens to be a good example of it."

Inside the Ravens' locker room, some of Oher's teammates have teased the big rookie about the flick. But they are also psyched about seeing it.

"Don't get me wrong, we're a tough crowd now. We're gonna get on him, but it is all tough love," Ravens safety Ed Reed said. "It's all out of love, man. Oher knows what's going to come with it to some degree."

Oher said it's possible his opponents will glean some verbal nuggets from the movie to use against him during games.

"I don't care about that kind of stuff. I play football and I do what I do," Oher said. "It will be funny to me."

Because of the understated way he is approaching it, Oher's teammates aren't concerned that the movie will be a distraction for him or the Ravens.

"Mike is kind of a shy guy anyway," Ravens linebacker Jarret Johnson said. "He is kind of reserved, stands back and now he's got a movie coming out about him that portrays his whole life, so I can see where it would be difficult for him. But anybody that knows Mike, Mike is an awesome guy. He is going to be a great player. And I know the guys in the locker room think it is pretty cool."

Cundiff looking forward to making pressure kicks

By Edward Lee
The Baltimore Sun
November 19, 2009

When the Cleveland Browns signed Billy Cundiff almost two months ago, the kicker put spending time with his wife and daughter and a job at a venture capital firm in Phoenix on the back burner.

Those plans were delayed again when the Ravens signed Cundiff Wednesday, one day after waiving Steve Hauschka.

"I had actually been doing work, sitting at my computer and doing a bunch of things," Cundiff, 29, said. "I had kind of gone with the idea that I would probably be in Phoenix for a while. Then my phone rang [about 4 p.m. Eastern Standard time], and in two hours, my bags were packed and I was ready to get onto an airplane."

Cundiff's signing capped three days of turmoil, which began Monday night when Hauschka missed a 36-yard field goal and had an extra-point attempt blocked in the Ravens' 16-0 win over the Cleveland Browns. It was Hauschka's third miss in his past seven field-goal tries, and all three were hooked left from the left hash mark.

Hauschka's troubles continued to be a topic of discussion Wednesday for coach John Harbaugh, who had chosen the second-year kicker from North Carolina State over fan favorite Matt Stover.

"It's always tough," Harbaugh said. "You look around the league, and until you have that established guy - a guy that you have over the years under contract, he's with you and you know he's going to be there - this is what teams go through. So we were hoping it would work out with Steve. You'd love for the young guy you bring in to be the kicker for the next 10 years, and that's always the goal. I think we've worked hard to try to make that happen. We took it as long as we could, but this season and the next couple of games are really important. He's just not there yet for us."

Cundiff, who won the kicking job with the Dallas Cowboys as an undrafted rookie in 2002, beat out Mike Nugent in part because Cundiff displayed more power on kickoffs than Nugent - who had worked out for the Ravens twice in three weeks. Harbaugh said he and special teams coordinator Jerry Rosburg - who coached Cundiff with the Atlanta Falcons in 2007 - took note of Cundiff's leg during warm-ups preceding the team's 34-3 thumping of the Browns on Sept. 27.

"Looked good on field goals. We watched him during pre-game," Harbaugh said. "He had a really good career in Dallas. I think he got hurt a little bit at one point in Dallas, but he's been a talented guy throughout his whole career. So you kind of start with that foundation of talent. That kind of means a lot. He's had success, and his career numbers look pretty good. We'll just see how it goes. There's no way to accurately foresee what's going to happen, but he's a veteran kicker who's been in this situation before."

In six seasons in the NFL, Cundiff made 66 of 89 field goals (74.2 percent) and 104 of 105 extra points (99.0). He connected on all six of his field goals with the Browns this season but was released more than two weeks ago when Phil Dawson's pulled right calf muscle improved.

Cundiff said he understands the expectations he will face.

"I think in the NFL, it's a replacement business," he said. "You just understand that no matter where you go - whether the guy did really well before you or the guy struggled a little bit - your job doesn't change. You're brought in here to make field goals, and if you don't, you're shown the door. So I know that my objective is to come out and provide the team some stability, make some kicks, and hopefully help the team win. That's not going to change."

Cundiff joins the team in the unenviable position of satisfying a Ravens fan base still unhappy with the franchise's decision not to re-sign Stover. Coincidentally, Stover, now a member of the Indianapolis Colts, will be on the opposing sideline at M&T Bank Stadium on Sunday.

While cognizant of Stover's list of achievements with the Ravens - Cundiff said former Ravens punter Dave Zastudil, now with the Browns, briefed him on Stover's history - Cundiff said he is looking forward to matching kick for kick with Stover.

"He did a lot of really good things," Cundiff said. "To be quite honest with you, there are a lot of guys around the league that have done very similar things and the guy that comes in after them, they always have the same thing to deal with. So I think it's good, because if you have the bar set really high, you obviously have got to raise your game to make sure you meet that. If you're not willing to accept that challenge, then you're in the wrong business. This is a very pressure-driven business, and you've got to enjoy it."

Ravens benefit from production by trio of rookies

By David Ginsburg
The Associated Press
December 3, 2009

OWINGS MILLS, Md. (AP)—Ozzie Newsome and the Baltimore Ravens are reaping the benefits of yet another good draft.

Three players selected by Newsome in the 2009 NFL draft have become significant contributors. The play of rookies Michael Oher, Lardarius Webb and Paul Kruger have the Ravens (6-5) in the thick of the AFC wild-card hunt.

Oher has started every game at offensive tackle and Webb was a solid special teams contributor before taking over last week for injured Fabian Washington as a starting cornerback. Kruger didn't get much action in September and October, but his interception in overtime last Sunday night against Pittsburgh was one of biggest defensive plays of Baltimore's season.

Oher was taken with the 23rd overall pick, Kruger went 57th and Webb was No. 88. Combine those three with second-year standouts Joe Flacco and Ray Rice, and it's no wonder the Ravens are excited about the future.

"We've had really good drafts the past two years, so if you look at our group out there, it's really a young team in a lot of ways," coach John Harbaugh said Thursday. "We have a great mix of veteran leadership, but there's a lot of first, second and third-year players who are playing a lot of football for us and having an impact on games. That's really important in this league."

Newsome has been in charge of Baltimore's draft since the team arrived from Cleveland before the 1996 season. Even when forced to draft late in each round because of the Ravens' success, he still manages to find a gem or two—or three.

After Baltimore won the Super Bowl in 2001, Newsome snagged tight end Todd Heap in the subsequent draft. Last April, though the Ravens were coming off an appearance in the AFC championship game, Newsome outdid himself.

Oher has been outstanding at right tackle and held his own when forced to move to the left side for two games.

"He came in and looked good from the start," third-year guard Ben Grubbs said. "I don't see anything but an upside for him."

Said Oher: "The coaches and everybody are doing a good job of getting me prepared for Sundays. I'm just doing my part, working hard and staying focused."

Webb began the returning and covering kicks on special teams. But after Washington was placed on injured reserve with a knee injury, Webb got his first NFL start and had nine tackles against the Steelers.

"Lardarius Webb, he hasn't slowed down at all. He wants to learn so much and he's trying to dissect it all," said linebacker Ray Lewis, one of Newsome's former first-round picks. "The conversations we have, he's always trying to grab something. He plays the game with complete passion and has ability, too. Anytime you have that combination in a young kid, you put him on the field, sometimes you find a star very early.

"I don't want to put too much pressure on him, but I just love the way he plays the game," Lewis said. "Kruger's the same way. He's a very energetic guy in his own way. He's our type of player."

Kruger was a star linebacker at Utah, but upon arriving in Baltimore found himself stuck behind three-time Pro Bowl standout Terrell Suggs. Kruger was on the inactive list for seven of the first eight weeks, but he worked himself into the lineup Week 9 against Cleveland and has showed steady improvement heading into Monday night's game at Green Bay.

Any lingering disappointment over his slow start was erased by his performance against Pittsburgh, when he picked off a Dennis Dixon pass and returned it 26 yards to set up the game-winning field goal in a 20-17 win.

"It was what I've been working for. As soon as you see that happen, it's really an awesome thing," Kruger said. "It was definitely awesome to be a part of the win."

That kind of performance—and a willingness to improve—has enabled the three rookies to avoid getting ribbed by their older teammates.

"Each week I try to get better. Last week wasn't good enough," Webb said. "It hasn't come to the point where they've seen me slacking off. I know they're waiting for that, but I'm not going to let it happen."

Ravens Defense One of NFL's Best

With a dominant showing, Baltimore ranks just behind the Jets in points allowed per game.

By Ryan Mink

December 21, 2009

The jig is up. The Baltimore Ravens defense is once again one of the best in the NFL.

That's not opinion, it's fact.

If measuring by points allowed, the Ravens are now the NFL's second-stingiest team behind the Rex Ryan-coached New York Jets.

The Ravens earned that distinction with their second defensive shutout Sunday night against the Chicago Bears, in which they tied a franchise record with six forced turnovers.

The Ravens average 16 points per game allowed, 0.5 points more than the Jets. Since their bye in Week 6, however, the Ravens have allowed the fewest points per game in the NFL at 11.9.

“I think we’ve been playing good defense for a long time now,” cornerback Domonique Foxworth said. “It’s not widely reported, which we prefer and is fine. I like people to think we’re not very good. They should keep that going.”

Foxworth notched two interceptions, Jarret Johnson logged his second pick of the season and Frank Walker nabbed an interception too. Haloti Ngata forced and recovered a fumble and David Tyree had a lost ball fall right into his arms on a kickoff return.

The Ravens surrendered just 220 total yards and held gun-slinging Jay Cutler to the lowest rating ever recorded by an opposing quarterback – 7.9. It’s the first time the Ravens have tallied six turnovers since Oct. 14, 2007. The franchise had done it five times before Sunday.

“We’re having a great time out there,” Ngata said. “It builds a lot of character when we are out there having fun. We’re coming together.”

Like he has before, Ngata gave credit to first-year defensive coordinator Greg Mattison for calling the right plays and putting players where they are supposed to be.

Mattison and the Ravens' defense came under fire after giving up 33 points to the Minnesota Vikings in Week 6. At that time, the defense was allowing more than 21 points per game and had been run over by back-to-back 100-yard rushers.

Ngata said it’s been a process for the players to learn Mattison’s play-calling and for Mattison to get used to the players.

“[Mattison] counts more on our defensive line to get pressure on the quarterback. Rex was more about confusing offenses and getting mismatches,” Ngata said. “Once we knew what each other was all about, it just all clicked.”

It was clicking from the start Sunday. Foxworth intercepted Cutler on the Bears’ opening drive, setting up a Ravens early touchdown strike. Then, after the Bears converted on a fourth-and-1 deep in Ravens territory, Johnson tipped a Cutler pass and made the juggling interception himself. That sparked another Ravens touchdown.

Just like the first half opened with a pair of turnovers, the second half started with two fumbles that broke the game open. Following a Ravens touchdown drive to open the third quarter, cornerback Cary Williams punched the ball out on a kickoff and it went straight to Tyree. The Ravens’ offense needed just five plays to get into the end zone from there.

Then, on the second play of the Bears’ next drive, Ngata stripped Bears running back Matt Forte and wrenched the ball out of a scrum. That led to a quick Baltimore field goal for the final score of the game and a 24-point lead.

“Something I think we focus on is creating turnovers on defense, and the offense definitely needs to thrive on that sudden change,” Foxworth said. “I think good teams can get a turnover, but great teams convert them.”

Foxworth said the Ravens’ interceptions were more the result of fastidious film watching than poor play by Cutler. The defensive line also got solid pressure up the middle, which often flushed Cutler from the pocket in which he’s so comfortable.

Add it all up and it’s a defense that Ngata claimed is playing at the same level as last year’s unit that led the Ravens to the AFC championship.

“I think we’re just as good,” Ngata said. “Guys are doing a great job fighting for each other and making plays we need to.”

Ravens poised for another ‘wild’ playoff run

By Charles Robinson

A year ago, the NFL’s No. 6 seeds were lethal.

We watched as the Baltimore Ravens and Eagles gathered themselves down the stretch, fueled by voracious defenses and swelled up with momentum. They chomped through higher seeds on the road, strung together improbable runs, and were stopped only one game from the grandest stage. And one year later, the Ravens appear poised to fill that role again.

With the Dolphins, Jets and Jacksonville Jaguars faltering this week, the Ravens are now in control of their playoff path. If they win their remaining games against the Steelers and Raiders – both on the road – the Ravens will be no worse than the AFC’s No. 6 seed in the playoffs. And with Baltimore seemingly building similar momentum to last season’s streaking finish, that can’t sit well with prospective first-round opponents like the Bengals or Patriots.

That’s not to say this is the same Baltimore team as the 2008 edition. The defense has had its moments, but still lacks that nasty, venomous edge that was overflowing in last year’s team. There’s no denying part of that strut went out the door with defensive coordinator Rex Ryan and linebacker Bart Scott, which coincided with some age setting in with the secondary. But this is still one of the best units in the NFL, quietly ranking second in the league in fewest points allowed, just an eyelash behind Ryan’s Jets.

And it’s not like the Ravens have suffered like the Steelers, who are suddenly surrendering points by gobs in the fourth quarter. Indeed, the Ravens have allowed only one team in the last eight games – the Packers – to score more than 17. During that span, they’ve led the league in fewest points allowed, relinquishing an average of only 11.8 per game. But such effort hasn’t been as flashy as past years, which were typically laced with monster turnover margins and skyrocketing sack totals. Indeed, the Ravens were tied for 13th in the NFL in takeaways coming into this week, and tied for 24th in sacks.

Those numbers were arguably diminished by the loss of linebacker Terrell Suggs, who missed three games after suffering a right knee injury. Since Suggs has returned, the Ravens have notched eight turnovers and three sacks in their last two games, albeit against the struggling offenses of the Lions and Bears. But the last quarter of the season is chiefly about three things for playoff teams: gaining momentum, remaining healthy and ironing out the last fixable creases in the game plan.

The Ravens were in a similar scenario last season, but on the other side of the ball – tweaking an offense that was going to have to win with a rookie quarterback. One year later, Joe Flacco has polished himself into a rising young veteran capable of winning games, complementing a solid offensive line, a strong and versatile running game, and a group of possession receivers who can string drives together.

The offense arguably has the fewest worries. And considering the defense still has three big playmakers in Ray Lewis, Suggs and safety Ed Reed – guys who thrive in the postseason – that may actually bode well for Baltimore. Whatever the case, the Ravens are once again picking up steam, and are in control as the final quarter of the season comes to a close. It has a familiar feel, and for other teams fighting for their own playoff positioning, not facing the Ravens might be as important as anything else.

Ravens' Heap, Williams step up

Tight end, wide-out make big plays for injured receiving unit

By Ken Murray
The Baltimore Sun
December 21, 2009

So this is what the Ravens' offense looks like when Todd Heap and Demetrius Williams get involved: touchdowns to the right, touchdowns to the left, touchdowns all over the place.

Down two wide-outs because of injury, the Ravens turned to their veteran tight end and their deep-threat apprentice Sunday to make a mockery of the Chicago Bears. Heap snared touchdown passes on the team's first two possessions, and Williams buried the Bears with a spectacular catch in the end zone in the third quarter.

In fact, quarterback Joe Flacco had his choice of touchdowns on the 32-yard strike he threw to Williams three minutes into the second half. There, in an underneath route, was a wide-open Heap. And beyond him, Williams raced for the end zone, step-for-step with cornerback Charles Tillman.

Feeling confident in Williams, Flacco went for the home run.

"I had one-on-one with him," Flacco said after the 31-7 rout pushed the Ravens closer to a postseason berth. Williams "did a great job of going up for the ball. And I had trust that he was going to get it for me.

"Todd came off the sideline and said, 'Yeah, it's a good thing you threw a touchdown there, because you had one to me if you didn't get that one.' So it was a good thing I completed it, because I would have been [mad] at myself, too, if I didn't throw it."

Heap's 14-yard touchdown catch on a slant to beat Corey Graham to the left was his first visit to the end zone since Week 2. His 7-yard scoring catch, beating Graham again, on the next series matched his season total of two touchdowns - less than 13 minutes into the game.

Playing without wide-outs Mark Clayton (knee) and Kelley Washington (ankle), the Ravens were able to move Heap into favorable matchups against Graham.

"They were going to play one of two defenses, and when they came out and lined up the way they did, my eyes lit up a little bit, and Joe's did as well," Heap said. "Both touchdowns, we got the looks that we wanted."

The Ravens' proficiency in a wind chill of 20 degrees said a lot about their resilience in the passing game, and a lot about the Bears' secondary.

"Some teams in certain personnel groups put corners out there," offensive coordinator Cam Cameron said. "But this is one of the few teams that brings in a third safety, so when they bring a third safety and we go two tight ends, it was a way for us to get Todd a matchup on a safety instead of a corner. We saw they had done that against Green Bay and felt like we'd take advantage of it. But the bottom line is, it's all good, fine and dandy, but if you don't execute, it doesn't matter. It was great execution by Todd and Joe."

Chris Chester, who started 10 games at right guard before giving way to Marshal Yanda, was the second tight end in on that package.

Flacco threw for 234 yards and a career-high four touchdowns, playing pitch and catch with his receivers.

Derrick Mason, playing the 200th game of his 13-year NFL career, led with six catches for 87 yards and one touchdown. Heap pulled down five for 56 and two scores, and Williams grabbed four for 71 (averaging 17.8 per catch).

Flacco referred to Williams' 32-yarder as "that ridiculous catch in the end zone." It was reminiscent of the 34-yard catch he made a week ago at the 5-yard line against the Detroit Lions, going up for a high throw.

"When you see guys making plays like that, it gives you all the trust in the world," Flacco said. "It makes me want to give them more plays, give them more chances. It was great to get Todd in there, get him going, get him some touchdown passes - a lot of fun."

Williams had six catches for 116 yards the past two games against NFC North teams. He had one catch for 17 in the first 12 games.

"Really, his lack of playing time was a tribute to how well Mark Clayton was playing at times and Kelley Washington," Cameron said. "Now they're both down and he stepped up. He's really bought in to what we're doing. He's been playing at a pretty high level at practice. Unfortunately [for Williams], the other guys were playing well, too. We kept telling him to stay ready, and he stayed ready. I think a lot of credit goes to Demetrius."

Ravens McClain flourishing in new blocking role

By Aaron Wilson
Carroll County Times
December 25, 2009

OWINGS MILLS — Le'Ron McClain built a reputation last season for bulldozing linebackers as he displayed unique quickness for a burly back who was usually a few biscuits under 270 pounds.

One year after making the Pro Bowl for the first time as the Ravens' leading rusher, the only major differences are the absence of a football in his hands the majority of the time and that McClain is noticeably slimmer.

The Baltimore Ravens' rugged fullback has accepted and excelled in his new role as a primary lead blocker, clearing pathways for star running back Ray Rice.

"I'm just doing my job," said McClain, who rushed for 902 yards and 10 touchdowns last season. "Whenever my number is called in whatever way — blocking, running or catching, however my role expands — I just continue to do whatever they want me to do.

"Ray is having a great All-Pro year. He's a great guy. When we get in the game, it's just amazing to watch him."

Dashing behind his offensive line and McClain's blocks, Rice has rushed for 1,128 yards heading into Sunday's pivotal game against the Pittsburgh Steelers at Heinz Field.

Rice's 1,797 yards from scrimmage ranks second in the NFL behind Tennessee Titans runner Chris Johnson. And Rice also leads the Ravens with 73 receptions for 669 yards, breaking the franchise single-season record in both categories.

The Ravens have the ninth-ranked running game, averaging 127.5 yards per contest and are averaging 25 points per game. The Ravens piled up 308 rushing yards in a rout of the Detroit Lions two weeks ago as Rice rushed for a career-high 166 yards in essentially one half of work.

As gifted as Rice is, those gaping holes he has dashed through would probably be a lot smaller without McClain's sledge-hammer blocks.

"A fullback is a fullback, and the fullback's one responsibility is to block," offensive coordinator Cam Cameron said. "When he's also a good runner, a good receiver, I think he's an unselfish person to start with.

"I'm not going to take any credit, or we don't take any credit for making some guys unselfish. This guy is a team player, and a lot of things he's doing this year helping us … don't show up on the stat sheet. So, he's improving in all areas."

Rice has emerged as one of the top all-purpose backs in the game.

He ranks second in franchise history in total yards from scrimmage behind Jamal Lewis' 2,271-yard campaign back in 2003 when he was the NFL Offensive Player of the Year.

"I've always wanted it this way," Rice said. "I want them to see me as a dual threat out of the pass and the run. I want teams to respect me when I'm out there. Just a credit to our team pushing me along."

Added McClain: "Him and Chris Johnson are two of the best backs out there. He'll make something happen. He's a little guy with a lot of power."

On Sunday, McClain will square off with a formidable set of linebackers made up of James Harrison, James Farrior, Lawrence Timmons and LaMarr Woodley.

"They're great linebackers, Farrior and Timmons are two of the best in the league," McClain said. "You watch the film and you try to get little keys to get the jump on them. It's a good matchup."

Besides his blocking, McClain has also contributed when called upon in short-yardage situations.

He has rushed for 158 yards on 39 carries, scoring two touchdowns. And he has caught 19 passes for 133 yards.

That's more involvement than most fullbacks around the league in what had recently been described as a dinosaur position.

"And you've got to remind yourself, too, just how young of a player he is," Cameron said of McClain. "He's still a young player, and I think a great player. I've noticed there are some fullbacks coming around in this league.

"We were all thinking that the fullback position was pretty much almost extinct, but I see some good fullbacks out there and it's nice that we've got one of the best ones."

Ravens beat: Depth charge helps hobbled team rise

As starters — and backups — go down, reserves step up

By Jamison Hensley
The Baltimore Sun
December 25, 2009

When someone is out with an injury, the Ravens always talk about Next Man Up. This season, it has been more like Next Next Man Up.

Injuries have been a major story line for the Ravens in the second half of this season, but they have refused to allow it to become a factor in their playoff run.

After being healthy for the first nine games (three starters missed a total of five games), the Ravens have endured some pains the past five weeks (seven starters have been forced to miss games). These injury issues have hit three positions hard - wide receiver, offensive line and secondary - testing the Ravens' depth.

When wide receiver Mark Clayton went down with knee and hamstring injuries, Kelley Washington started in his place. When Washington injured his ankle in his first start, the team had to rely on fourth-string wide receiver Demetrius Williams to play.

On the offensive line, the Ravens would have replaced injured left tackle Jared Gaither (foot and back) with Adam Terry. But Terry, their top backup entering training camp, never made it to the preseason because of a knee injury. That meant Oniel Cousins, who hadn't been active all season, was pushed into a starting role in December.

But no area on the team has suffered more significant injuries than the secondary. When Fabian Washington went down with a season-ending knee injury Nov. 22, rookie Lardarius Webb took advantage of the opportunity and solidified himself as a starter.

Then, midway through his fourth start, Webb tore the anterior cruciate ligament in his right knee. With two starting cornerbacks on injured reserve, the Ravens are now starting their third cornerback (Chris Carr) opposite Domonique Foxworth.

It's the same issue at safety. The Ravens likely would have used Haruki Nakamura to fill in for Ed Reed. But Nakamura is already on injured reserve with an ankle injury. So with Reed sidelined with a groin injury, the Ravens have gone with Tom Zbikowski.

"We've been so unfortunate," Webb said of the secondary. "You start thinking, 'Who's next?' "

Another injury for the Ravens could make it Next Next Next Man Up.

From Rutgers to Ravens, Rice Wins Believers

By Dave Caldwell
The New York Times
December 26, 2009

OWINGS MILLS, Md. — A round of news conferences ended with Ray Rice, the Baltimore Ravens' 5-foot-8 running back, following Joe Flacco, their 6-6 quarterback. Rice laughed as he adjusted a microphone holder far, far downward.

After helping to lift the long-sleepy Rutgers program to national prominence, Rice was not selected until the second round of the 2008 N.F.L. draft, primarily because he was considered too short and perhaps too one dimensional.

Pittsburgh Steelers Coach Mike Tomlin, whose 7-7 team hosts the 8-6 Ravens in a critical game Sunday, has made it sound as if Rice — not Flacco, who was picked 37 spots ahead of Rice — has become more than just an offensive focal point for Baltimore.

"He's their leading rusher, he's their leading receiver, he's a big-time player — not only for them, but in the big scope of things in this league," Tomlin said Wednesday. "He's gotten to that status."

Rice, 22, has 1,128 yards on 210 carries and 669 yards on 73 receptions. Only Tennessee's Chris Johnson has accounted for more yards from scrimmage per game than Rice, who has scored 8 touchdowns and has amassed 71 first downs.

After reporters had dissipated from the news conferences at the Ravens' indoor practice field Wednesday, Rice said in a soft voice that he was delighted with his progress, particularly this season. But his voice carried an edge when he said he was still improving.

"I'm not a guy who gets complacent," Rice said. "They all said coming out of high school that I was too short — well, I nipped that at Rutgers.

"You look at Maurice Jones-Drew," he continued, referring to the Jacksonville Jaguars' 5-7 running back, "and nobody talks about how short he is."

As a rookie a year ago, Rice was not even the second-leading rusher on his team. Fullback Le'Ron McClain and running back Willis McGahee ran for more yardage, and Rice missed the Ravens' last three regular-season games because of a lower leg injury. This season, Rice has more than twice as many rushing yards as McClain and McGahee combined.

Rice said, "I feel like I'm earning my keeps in this league."

He says he feels if he learns something new every day. During his news conference Wednesday, when he talked about the challenge of facing the Steelers, Rice said the best thing about him and Flacco is that both are still just scratching the surface of their potential.

The Ravens' running backs coach is Wilbert Montgomery, the former 5-10 running back who holds the Philadelphia Eagles' record for career rushing yardage. Rice said he took a pen and pad to meetings with Montgomery, prepared to tap a resource.

"It's priceless what he means to me," Rice said of Montgomery.

Rice became known as a sturdy ball carrier at Rutgers, rolling up a team-record 4,926 yards on 910 carries in three seasons. When asked Wednesday if he felt in any way worn down after 14 games, Rice said he actually took a harder pounding in college.

Even though he has gained 20 pounds since college and is listed at 210, he is regarded as a dual threat. He caught only 37 passes in three seasons at Rutgers; he had 10 receptions alone in a 33-31 loss to Minnesota on Oct. 18. He has at least three receptions in Baltimore's last 13 games.

"He's on top of what we're doing game-plan-wise," Flacco said. "And he knows what it takes to bust some of those plays."

Michael Oher, the Ravens' 310-pound rookie offensive tackle, said of Rice: "He's an incredible player. He's a fan of the game. He loves what he's doing. It's very important that he wants to win."

Rice has the first stall in the locker room at the Ravens' practice facility, but his next-door neighbor for two years, outside linebacker Jarret Johnson, said Rice was hardly ever there. Before practice, Rice seems to flit from room to room as if darting through a hole.

"He seems to have come a long way," Johnson said. "Good guy from a small town — well, not a small town, but a suburb of the city — but he's down to earth. The ultimate teammate."

Rice grew up in a tough neighborhood in New Rochelle, N.Y., and his oft-told life story is far from idyllic. His father, Calvin Reed, was killed in a drive-by shooting when Rice was 1, and his cousin and father figure, Myshaun Rice-Nichols, died in a car accident in 1998.

Rice's mother, Janet, became a celebrity of sorts during her son's three years at Rutgers, for her vocal support of the Scarlet Knights. Rice said she went to most of the Ravens' home games, but would not be in Pittsburgh for Sunday's game.

"It's kind of cold and rowdy out there," Rice said, smiling.

He is looking forward to another challenge in a rough atmosphere. After returning from a leg injury last season, Rice carried the ball only one time for 2 yards and caught three passes when the Ravens lost to the Steelers in the A.F.C. championship game, 23-14, at Heinz Field.

Rice and the Ravens have progressed since then. Rice has helped make them more versatile, more explosive, less reliant on their defense. As wide receiver Derrick Mason said, "We kind of feel as if there's not a play we can't make as an offense."

Rice is not exactly that confident. He said he was taking his success in stride. When they write the final chapter to the story of the Ravens' season, he said, maybe he will take a deep breath and appreciate a year in which he broke loose. But he is enjoying himself too much now. He is, after all, standing tall for an N.F.L. team that needs him.

"I love the way they're using me," he said.

Refusing to Give Up

Dawan Landry has returned to his physical style after last year's neck injury.

A strange thing happened in the hospital following the injury.

It was the second game of the season last year and Dawan Landry had been carted off the field after losing all feeling in his extremities after a tackle.

His younger brother, LaRon (starting safety for the Washington Redskins), sat bedside and was uncommonly quiet.

Lying recumbent in the hospital room, Dawan had started regaining feeling in his fingertips, a welcome sign following a spinal cord concussion.

If anyone should understand the reality and brutality of the NFL game, it should have been LaRon.

But it was immediately following the injury and even the ensuing weeks that saw LaRon trying to convince his older brother to retire his cleats and walk away from the game – the game that had played such a pivotal role in their lives as children.

For LaRon, the injury served as a wakeup call to question the quality of life and future of his brother. For Dawan, the injury also forced him the face the unquestionable future.

Specifically, Dawan wanted to know when – when he could suit up once again for the Ravens.

As winner of this year's Ed Block Courage Award, Dawan has proven that an indomitable will and a tenacious effort can overcome the most serious of hurdles. The award, which is voted on by teammates, honors those NFL players who exemplify sportsmanship and courage.

But long before he was a starter on the Raven's defense, Dawan's road to the NFL was paved with hours in the gym and years competing against the best competition – namely his two brothers.

Dawan – the middle brother – knew that hanging around his older brother would benefit him down the line.

“My brothers and I were always pushing each other and because of that, we were constantly challenging ourselves,” said Landry. “Growing up, you’re bound to get better if you’re playing with guys who are older and stronger than you. So I spent as much time as I could around the bigger guys.”

When the brothers weren’t proving themselves on the basketball court, on the field or in the yard, they were also given boxing gloves that became a natural measuring stick of their athletic prowess.

The older brother typically won, but it only served to fuel the competitive fire of the younger one.

Landry attributes his unrelenting spirit to two very important people in his life:

“My parents definitely,” said Landry. “I was taught early on that you really had to go after what you want and I learned a lot from them.”

Becoming a professional athlete was always the goal for No. 26. In high school, he excelled in both basketball and football. He was recruited to play the latter at Georgia Tech not as a safety, but rather a quarterback.

However, after changing to the defensive side of the ball, Landry left Tech recording the third-most tackles in school history for a defensive back.

His physical style and consistency (he never missed a game his final three years in college) raised many eyebrows within the Ravens’ scouting department.

It was apparent his mentality and approach to game were equally as valued when he eventually stepped into the starting lineup as a rookie opposite Ed Reed in the Ravens’ secondary.

“It’s really important to be tenacious in all aspects of the game – on the field and off it,” said Landry. “All the success we have on Sunday is because of a total focus in the meetings, watching film and practicing the right way. You can’t just expect to go out there and make plays. It doesn’t work like that. You have to be 100% committed.”

His rookie campaign was considered such a success that he was one of only seven players to receive a vote for AP Defensive Rookie of the Year honors.

Landry went on to start every game of 2007 and was primed to continue raising his level of play in 2008 when he sustained a Jamal Lewis knee to the top of his helmet. In an instant, his season was over and his playing career tentatively in the balance.

Landry knew he would play again, but admits to struggling with the experience.

“That was a tough situation to deal with last season,” said Dawan. “But it wasn’t because of the rehab. I’ve always been a gym rat, so the physical part of it was not a problem. The hard part was having to watch the game and not being able to contribute on the field. It was especially tough because they had such a great season and you just want to be a part of it. I knew I was working hard to come back but that was difficult.”

Fortunately for the Ravens, Landry exhibited the tireless determination ingrained in him at such a young age to return as a starter for the team.

This season, Dawan Landry has been a mainstay in the starting lineup for an injury-plagued secondary, recording 74 tackles and four interceptions, returning one for a touchdown.

Week in and out, he continues to live up to his nickname “Wop,” a moniker earned for the violent sound of his collisions and tackles on the field.

Most certainly, he has proven to his younger brother, LaRon, that the decision to continue playing professional football was the right choice.

“We definitely are still competitive,” said the elder brother. “Even to this day whether it’s in a race or on the basketball court, we’ll still go at it. I have older cousins who still won’t back down to this day who I grew up with. I really don’t see that stopping anytime soon, even after I’m done with my career.”

Despite economic slump, Ravens stay healthy

While other teams face loss of value, TV blackouts, Baltimore thrives

It wasn't that long ago when owning an NFL franchise was nearly a no-risk venture. Revenue sharing, a salary cap and the most lucrative television contract in professional sports made it virtually impossible to go wrong from a business standpoint. Even if the team floundered, your bank account did not.

But the recent recession ushered in a new set of realities. For the first time in a decade, eight NFL teams saw their overall value decline, according to annual rankings compiled by Forbes magazine. League-wide, ticket sales are down nearly 10 percent. The NFL said this week that it expects that at least 25 games, and possibly as many as 50, will be blacked out on local television this season.

Yet despite the uncertainty, the Baltimore Ravens are one of the teams on a steady path of growth and what they hope is long-term prosperity.

The Ravens were ranked as the 11th-most-valuable NFL franchise by Forbes at $1.079 billion, up 2 percent from the previous year.

The team has sold out its 2009 home games, bringing its consecutive regular-season sellout streak to 112 games, dating to the birth of the franchise. Despite playing in one of the league's smallest media markets - 26th of 32 teams - and having virtually no national following, the Ravens had an estimated $240 million of revenue last year, better than 21 teams, according to Forbes.

Although Ravens president Dick Cass concedes it has been a struggle to renew the leases on the corporate suites inside M&T Bank Stadium in this economy, sponsorship dollars have actually increased by about 1 percent, a fairly impressive figure considering unemployment just hit a 26-year high.

"It's a challenging time, there is no doubt about that," said Cass, entering his sixth year as president of the Ravens. "We've been extremely fortunate. I think we have very loyal fans, we're coming off a good year, and we have high hopes for this year. That makes a big difference. Our season-ticket renewal rate is 99 percent, or higher. I think that indicates to us that people made a big sacrifice to hold onto their season tickets and keep coming to games, and I think that's a big tribute to our team and the place we've come to hold in this city."

It's still no cheap outing to attend a Ravens game. Even without factoring in parking ($25) and food, the average Ravens ticket costs $77, slightly above the league average. But to purchase that ticket at face value, you almost have to own a personal seat license, since 96 percent of all tickets sold are season tickets, and the ones that aren't sell out within minutes of going on sale. The average value of a Ravens PSL fell slightly this year, but the cost to buy one is still somewhere between $2,000 and $25,000, depending on the market and where they are in the stadium.

"I think the PSLs have helped us, because they've increased in value substantially since they were first issued," Cass said. "If you're a fan and you cannot afford to hold onto your season tickets any longer, what you do is sell your PSL. It's a little like the housing market. If you've got to sell your house in this market, you're going to get a little less than you would have the year before. But there is still a market. There is still value there. They have enough value that someone is willing to buy them."

That's hardly the case in cities like Detroit, San Diego, Oakland and Jacksonville, which all anticipate television blackouts this season. Already, 17,000 Jaguars season ticket holders declined to renew from a year ago. The team's average ticket price is tied with the Cleveland Browns for the lowest in the NFL at $55.

The Vikings still have around 6,000 season tickets available, even though the signing of Brett Favre sparked a run of 3,200 season ticket sales, according to the Minneapolis Star-Tribune. The Vikings haven't sold out any of their games, and still have more than 1,000 tickets available to each one. The Cincinnati Bengals have had 44 consecutive sellouts, but that is in jeopardy this year. One of their preseason games was already blacked out.

"I think generally the NFL made a mistake during expansion," said John Moag, former head of the Maryland Stadium Authority, who negotiated the Ravens move from Cleveland after Baltimore was denied a team during the expansion process. "I think they misread growth potential of the Jacksonville market. I think Baltimore got over its NFL separation with the Colts rather quickly when this team came to town. There is no question it is a very strong brand in the NFL, and it's even stronger here in the Baltimore area. People are loath to give up their tickets. Whether we like it or not, it ranks up there with religion for some people."

Alice Edwards, a school bus contractor from Forest Hill, could have pocketed a tidy profit when she sold her two club-level PSLs, doubling her initial $5,000 investment. But Edwards couldn't leave the Ravens behind. So she applied the profits toward buying four new seats in a better section. "My sons and I are die-hard Ravens fans," she said.

Marc Ganis, the president of Sports Corp Limited, a Chicago-based sports marketing firm, said that even though the Ravens are a relatively young franchise, the history of professional football in the city - especially when combined with the team's recent success - has fostered an intense loyalty.

"When the Colts were successful there, football was very popular," Ganis said. "That kind of thing continues for generations. It's extremely hard to create something where it never existed. But if you lose that kind of following where it did exist, it's not as hard to get it back."

Cass said the Ravens have tried to look for additional sources of revenue for the team, and booking more nonfootball events at M&T Bank Stadium is one avenue.

Earlier this year, the Ravens played host to an international soccer match between Chelsea and AC Milan that sold 72,000 tickets, and the team is hopeful it can host a similar match next summer. The NCAA Lacrosse Final Four will also be played at M&T Bank Stadium in 2010 and 2011, and the team has expressed interest in hosting a World Cup match if the United States is awarded the competition in 2018. Because the state owns the stadium, the team splits the profits from those events with the Maryland Stadium Authority after taking 10 percent as a management fee.

"Some of those events, we don't make a lot of money," Cass said. "But we do them partly as payback, because we're a state-owned facility and there are a lot of ancillary benefits to the city like hotel rooms, and partly because we get on a list of stadiums that can do big events and put on a good event."

The Ravens do draw a small amount of revenue from local merchandise sales and Ravens-themed Maryland Lottery tickets, but the amount of money they bring in is fairly small compared with the revenue generated from ticket sales, suites leases and corporate sponsorships.

But the team's primary focus is to continue to grow its local fan base. The team plans to install high-definition screens inside the stadium for the 2010 season, which should cost between $8 million and $9 million, but Cass feels it's a necessary expense.

"We're competing against people's high-definition televisions at home," Cass said. "You have to make it worthwhile for the fans to come to the stadium."
